IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa—(By Wireless)—An essential condition of any armistice with Italy is that the Allied forces shall have the use of Italian soil for continuing the war against Germany.

There should be no room for misunderstanding about that. We cannot afford an armistice that would leave Italy in the status of a neutral nation like Switzerland so that we would be fenced off from using it for advanced airfields from which to attack German war industries around Vienna and Czechoslovakia and elsewhere.

Clapper

I feel certain that in General Eisenhower's mind there is a clear distinction between armistice and peace terms. If you read his message to the Italian people carefully, and add to it the Roosevelt and Churchill statements since Mussolini's resignation, a pattern becomes clear. As to peace, we promise that the people of Italy will be given an opportunity to select their own government. We promise that the Allied attitude will be governed by the four freedoms. We promise that toward the people of Italy we will take the same friendly attitude we have taken toward the people of Sicily, where we are helping them restore order and the normal functioning of their cities.

But for an immediate armistice, we insist upon occupying the country. That is made plain in General Eisenhower's statement.

It would be unfortunate if we were now to go into a detailed discussion of boundaries and other political details. President Roosevelt has warned against that. I know that the military command here feels the same way. General De Gaulle has been hinting in broadcasts that France must be considered in any territorial settlement with Italy. The British foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, says no Italian colonies in Africa will be restored. But right now the main point is to end Italian resistance in a way that will enable us to move our air force up into northern Italy for the final smashing of German industries hitherto out of reach.

The Italian people are lucky to have such an opportunity as is offered them to return to a free world. They will be especially lucky if they can have the kind of occupation the people of Sicily are enjoying. I say enjoying, because in Palermo, for instance, the people have been liberated from the terrific punishment of the Allied air bombardment which demolished their waterfront area.

The kind of officer detailed to administer civilian affairs in Sicily, to help the people resume normal life, is a most important and significant indication of how the Allies hope to proceed elsewhere in liberated territory. This officer is not a professional army man, but instead a man of long experience in public administration in America. He held one of the highest state offices in the country. The fact that the Allies place a man of that caliber in charge—he is of Italian ancestry, speaking the language naturally—is the best tipoff to the Italians that they can trust the Allies to give them a fair break.

I think one word of caution to people in America is timely. The Germans are in Italy in considerable force. They have thus far followed a policy of fighting hard delaying actions, keeping the war away from German soil. They appear determined to establish a line somewhere in Italy. They may try to occupy at least a part of Italy in the same way they occupied France.

If that proves to be the case we still face hard fighting in Italy. The real battle for Germany, aside from the air war which is now going on, may be fought on Italian soil in an effort by the Germans to keep the Allied airpower in Italy from getting within striking distance of the fatherland. If we win that battle, then Germany will be back on her last line, and her whole country will be open to heavy air attack. Therefore the most desperate German fight may still be ahead—unless the Russians knock the fight out of them on the eastern front.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—I am not saying that in a war against a totalitarian power it is wrong to adopt, temporarily, in a free country, some of the devices which the enemy employs. I believe it is necessary and that just how far the free country must go in such imitation depends on the length and pressure of the emergency. In our country, however, some such measures were used long before we recognized the inevitability of military war, against a foreign power. They were resorted to in that emergency which was described as the war on want, in the course of which, incidentally, a few conspicuous well-connected individuals of the ruling group seized opportunities presented by the emergency and pyramided their incomes and their fortunes to great heights.

Pegler

I have been frisking my books for some presentation of the methods of fascism in Germany to serve as a standard by which we may determine whether, in fighting fascism, we have been going Fascist and I submit for consideration some observations written by Otto D. Tolischus, who was the correspondent of the New York Times in Berlin, in his book, "They Wanted War," published in 1940.

I think this citation is pertinent to the discussion aroused by the remarks of Vice President Henry Wallace in Detroit last Sunday in the course of which he touched up as American Fascists, some Americans who had turned against the New Deal administration. It seemed to follow that anyone who had turned against the administration was fascistic in his view.

I will point no parallels myself, but some may present themselves to you as you read.

Tolischus wrote that Hitler's economic mobilization was the key to the whole Nationalist Socialist economy and consisted of the total conscription of manpower, which Mrs. Roosevelt has earnestly proposed for us, thus far without success, and of its resources—"of capital and labor, producer and consumer, of men, women and youth and their coordination in a system ruled not by economic calculations but by iron discipline which still provides certain paternalistic 'socialism' for workers and leaves the limited profit motive to employers to spur their energies."

Tolischus said Hitler had created a gigantic trust devoted to total economic and military war and that those who would have opposed his methods were forced to adopt them in self-defense. When her rearmament began Germany was in an economic crisis with her industrial production down nearly 50 per cent and great unemployment. Our own state of affairs was very bad, too, about the time we entered the war on want.

By bringing her idle production capacity and idle labor together through "total conscription," Hitler wiped out unemployment and created his war machine. To do this, he fixed prices on a cost plus basis, and limited profits by price control and the compulsory investment in government loans of all profits above 6 to 8 per cent. However, some profits remained as high as 14 per cent and the investments in the loans, of course, are theoretically sound and are not confiscations or taxes. Companies were made to invest their surpluses in war-essential enterprises and were forbidden to build nonessential plants or, if permitted to build them, had to yield them to government control.

The wages of labor were fixed as of a certain date, subject to minor adjustments, workers were frozen to their jobs to prevent shifting, the right to strike was abolished and independent labor unions outside the labor front, a subsidiary of Hitler's party were forbidden. Virtually all food was rationed, to the detriment of the living standard and the prices of farm products were fixed and markets were regulated to compel delivery of products to the control agencies.

"Workers," Tolischus wrote, "enjoy a 'socialism' which improved working conditions through 'beauty of work' organization, established paid vacations for all, organized leisure and vacation recreation through 'strength through joy' organizations, provided labor courts for appeals against dismissal and honor courts for appeals against insults to workers' honor."

I recommend Tolischus' book to Wallace and all others who denounce as Fascists those who have opposed portions or all of the New Deal program from the beginning of the war on want to the present stage of the war on fascism and as well to those who have been so denounced.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Note: Sophie Tucker has a memory which is a treasure-house of anecdotes of Broadway. Here she writes of one of the greatest Broadwayites of all—Flo Ziegfeld.—D. K.)

Sophie Tucker Says—

I AM WRITING this from a shady spot near the pool of the house I rented in Beverly Hills. I came out here originally about 20 years ago and if a place can undergo a metamorphosis, Hollywood has. From a sun swept sand dune, it's now an opulent, glittering fairyland designed either for a Persian shah, or the setting for a Flo Ziegfeld show. Flo Ziegfeld! What memories his name conjures. I saw his wife, Billie Burke last night. Time hasn't touched her at all. She still is the same beautiful, talented girl I met so many years ago.

How well I recall my first meeting with Ziggie. It was my first real heartbreak. The year was 1909. Like every stage struck youngster, I wanted to be a star in a Broadway show. My agent sold me to Flo Ziegfeld for his Follies of 1909. Nora Bayes was the star.

My first job was to go up to Mr. Ziegfeld and introduce myself. He looked me over with his keen eyes and said: "You sing, don't you?" That's all he said.

After eight weeks of rehearsals the show was ready to move to Atlantic City for the opening and still Ziegfeld hadn't heard me sing. I didn't know a soul in the show. All I did was to sit out front and watch the rehearsals. I found I was to dress with Annabelle Whitford, the Nell Brinkley girl. Next door to us was Lillian Lorraine and her colored maid, Mollie Elkins. It amused me very much when Annabelle and Lillian asked me what I did in the show. In all of the eight weeks, those were the only words spoken to me by any members of the company.

Most of New York came down for the opening night in Atlantic City. Lillian Lorraine told me that Diamond Jim Brady was in the first row. At last the show got under way. There was a tremendous reception for Nora Bayes, who was introducing a song titled, "Shine On Harvest Moon." She took eleven encores. The song stopped the show. Finally, in a haze, I heard my introduction music.

* * *

To sum up a long story, I stopped the show cold. When I finished my first song, the audience stood up and yelled: "More, more." I sang the second song and still they wouldn't let me go. I then sang my last number and when that was finished, they began whistling and stamping.

All in all, I sang the last song twelve times. I was on the stage, I later learned, for 37 minutes.

When I got to my dressing room, Lillian and Annabelle kissed and hugged me. "You're the hit of the show," they kept yelling.

When the show was over, I began taking off my make-up. I wondered if Mr. Ziegfeld would come to the dressing room to congratulate me.

He did come back but it wasn't to congratulate me. He walked in and as I rose to greet him, he motioned for me to remain seated. I can still recall every word of what he said to me in his high pitched voice: "Miss Tucker, I'm sorry but I'll have to let you go. You'll draw your two week's salary from the company manager." He then turned and walked out.

I rose to my feet, my heart bursting and tears blinding me. Why? Why? Why? Finally, I stopped crying, changed my clothes and left the theater.

When I got to the Boardwalk, Irving Berlin was waiting for me. I ran up to him.

"Irving, I screamed, "I'm fired. I'm through."

Good kind, always thoughtful Irving, put his arm through mine and said, "Come on, Sophie, let's walk."

We must have walked for a mile before he spoke again. "Sophie, you were fired because Nora Bayes wanted you out of the show. Now don't think too harshly of Nora. She did the right thing. This is her first big show. She is the star. Put yourself in her position. Would you want someone in the show who on opening night went out for eight minutes and stayed on 37? This is show business, Sophie, and everyone must protect himself. But realize that no one is going to keep you from becoming a great star. Go home. Get some sleep and when you get back to New York come to see me. You're great."

That is the memory of my first show. It taught me a priceless lesson.

URGE PRIVATE INDUSTRY DO BIGGEST SHARE

Senators Propose Plan to Aid Returning Service Men, Suggest Talks.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Urging that the bulk of the burden of finding jobs for returning servicemen be carried by private enterprise rather than the government, Senators Burton (R.-Ohio) and Radcliffe (D.-Md.) suggested today that President Roosevelt confer soon with business and labor leaders to plan in detail for postwar conversion of war industry to peacetime pursuits.

Their assertions came in separate interviews after the president made public and endorsed his special postwar planning committee's recommendations that the government sponsor a demobilization and employment program for the armed forces and war industry workers.

The senators said they believed policies should be shaped under which the government would help private enterprise keep production lines going and thus provide the jobs returning soldiers will need.

"If you don't have the business activity that produces the jobs, it won't do a great deal of good to provide social security benefits," Burton declared.

"It would be a wonderful opportunity for the president now to get business and labor leaders together for a discussion of plans for the postwar period." Radcliffe said. "A great many of these men already are in the harness working for the government in the war effort and they could contribute some constructive ideas."

While both senators said they believed private business should carry the major share of the postwar re-employment of service men and women, they conceded that government help would be needed.

Both said they approved the president's program for war veterans, but asserted it did not go far enough. However, Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday that congress would have to work out the details of the program recommended by the special committee he appointed a year ago to plan "postwar readjustment of civilian and military personnel."

In general, the committee's report which he made public at his press-radio congress recommended for members of the armed forces three months' furlough or mustering-out pay of not more than $100 a month—but no lump bonus—plus additional unemployment insurance benefits where needed. Readjustment counsel, free tuition and allowances for education and training, old-age insurance benefit credits for service time and opportunities to work on and buy farms.

NEW STATION

North Side Residents to Get Sub-Station Service.

Affording additional postal service for residents of the north side of the city, a new postoffice sub-station was opened today at the Schmidt and Peat hardware store at 400 Bowman street, Acting Postmaster Frank Cave announced today.

The new station is the third in the city to go into operation although another in the south side of the city has been authorized.

The north end sub-tation will be open from 8 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. and will afford stamp, money order, parcel post, and registered mail service for residents of that section.

Third Mansfield DeMolay Awarded Chevalier Degree

Pfc. William J. Stahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stahl, 86 Dawson avenue, last night became the third member in the history of Baku chapter of DeMolay to receive the coveted chevalier degree, highest honor bestowed upon a member of DeMolay.

The presentation was made by Jesse W. Darling, Cincinnati, a member of the national DeMolay organization, at impressive ceremonies at Baka Grotto hall at which Stahl's father acted as master of ceremonies.

Young Stahl, now home on a furlough, also received the past master councilor's jewel, presented by his father, a member of the organization's representative committee.

Other members of the Mansfield chapter who previously received the chevalier degree are Emil Eisen and Robert Black.

DELAY DRIVING BAN REMOVAL

OMW Officials Hold Off Change In Gas Rationing While Byrnes Plans Report.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Petroleum Administrator Ickes today offered to meet with the unofficial congressional midwestern rationing committee in Chicago next week to discuss proposed changes in gasoline rationing outside of the eastern shortage area.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Plans to lift the eastern states ban on pleasure driving next week have been postponed a week or 10 days, it was learned today.

The plans are dependent upon a report on the gasoline situation being made by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes. The assumption is that it will recommend lifting the ban, although it could advise its continuance.

The delay has been caused by additional time needed for Byrnes to complete the report which is expected to do for the gasoline situation what the Baruch report did for the muddled rubber situation.

Whether the pleasure ban is lifted or not, the "A" card gasoline rationing between the east and the midwest will be equalized. Eastern motorists will get more gasoline per "A" coupon (they now get 1½ gallons a week), and midwestern motorists will get less (they now get four gallons a week).

The office of price administration is revising its regulations to take care of the equalization program, and is proceeding on the assumption that the pleasure driving ban will be lifted.

OPA officials warned motorists against over-optimism, reminding that even though the pleasure ban is lifted the weekly allowance will be tiny—something less than the four gallons a week now being allowed for "A" cars in the west.

RITES MONDAY

Funeral for E. L. Jenkins To Be at Finefrock's.

Funeral services of Edward L. Jenkins, 70, who died Friday morning, will be held at 9:30 a. m. Monday at the Finefrock funeral home.

Services will be conducted by Rev. James Ellington. Burial will be in the New Concord cemetery. Mr. Jenkins is survived by two brothers, and two sisters.

In this week's issue of Life are a series of pictures showing the U. S. army air force's first successful flight on Aug. 2, 1909, of an airplane. The plane, an antiquated flying crate, was piloted by Wilbur Wright, one of the designers. The passenger was Lieut. Frank P. Lahm of Mansfield, now Brig. Gen. Lahm. Others shown in the photos, all then lieutenants, are Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, George E. Stratemeyer, Carl Spaatz, Millard F. Harmon and Ralph Royce, all of whom have figured prominently in the air battles of World War II.

Nine times in court in 10 months and twice in the past two days on the same charge is too frequent, Acting Municipal Judge J. V. Will decided today in sentencing Reuben Fellenbaum, a Mansfield farm laborer, to 30 days in the county jail. Fellenbaum has been cited every time for intoxication. Arrested Thursday night by police, he posted $11.30 bond and forfeited it yesterday by failing to appear for hearing. He showed up at police headquarters last night, however, and officers found he was still too much "under the influence", and locked him up again. "This will give you a chance to sober up," said Acting Judge Will in passing sentence.

Orrville Man Who Killed His Mother Called Sane, But Needing Observation.

(By Associated Press)

LIMA — Arch R. Matteson, accused of murdering his mother in Orrville fourteen months ago, today was refused his freedom from Lima state hospital by the Third Disrict court of appeals.

Matteson's request for a writ of habeas corpus was denied for the time being on the recommendation of hospital superintendent R. E. Bushong. Dr. Bushong testified he believes the man is legally sane, but should be kept under observation until psychiatrists are convinced there is no possibility of a recurrence.

The court instructed Bushong to notify it whenever he feels that the man can safely resume his place in society.

A college educated former railway official, Matteson had told the court of the ever-increasing hallucinations which preceded the murder of believeng his mother was going insane. He told of having a vision that she would arise on the third day cured if she were killed. He did not admit any recollection of the slaying.

Matteson is in the hospital for the second time. He was released once when he apparently was restored to sanity but was recommitted when a Wayne county tribunal found him insane at the time of the slaying.

ASK COURT TO SETTLE PORTAL PAY IN MINES

Operators File Suit Against Lewis, Seek Judgment on Underground Travel.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Southern Appalachian coal operators struck at John L. Lewis' bargaining strategy today by carrying their prolonged coal dispute to court.

They have asked the federal district court at Abingdon, Va., to rule on the controversial portal-to-portal pay issue.

George Richardson, attorney for the Jewell Ridge Coal corporation, filed a petition at Roanoke late yesterday asking a declaratory judgment to determine the miners' claims to underground travel pay. The coal company, which operates mines in Tazewell and Buchanan counties, Va., will represent the association for the test.

Edward R. Burke, president of the association, who planned the suit, said an intervening petition would be filed in behalf of the association. He also reported that the northern Appalachian operators had assured him they would join in the contest.

Lewis and the United Mine Workers International union and UMW District 28 and its president, John Saxton, were named defendants in the suit.

The suit was filed as Lewis prepared to appear before the war labor board in defense of the agreement reached with Illinois operators after he had rejected a WLB order for settlement of the Appalachian dispute.

The WLB decision in the Applachian case rejected the union's demand for travel pay and suggested the issue could be settled in court.

Lewis did not attempt to carry the issue to court and instead bargained with Illinois operators, who agreed to pay $1.25 daily in travel pay.

Burke said Lewis had said the travel pay issue was the only obstacle to settlement and that the operators had taken the case to court for "a final decision from a competent court on this troublesome issue."

on" and that a mandamus suit would force prompt payment.

"We had reports the racketeers in Youngstown were spreading the word they had nothing more to fear because our investigation would fold up in mid-June because the auditor would hold up our expenses," Schuessler said.

In reply to Ferguson's charges that little had been accomplished by the vice investigation, Schuessler said there have been "a number of indictments involving both felonies and misdemeanors and every number racket has been run out of Youngstown."

Schuessler said all expenses of the entire investigating staff had been held up for two months and that Simon Leis, special investigator, had not been paid since March.

Ferguson, promised to investigate reports that investigators for the state division of aid for the aged have recommended divorces for elderly persons so they might become eligible for old age pensions.

He submitted a sworn affidavit of a Marion, O., man charging an investigator had recommended he divorce his 58-year-old wife as the only way to obtain a pension when she refused to sign over her property to the welfare division.

"I intend personally to investigate this atrocious, disgraceful matter, and to take it up with the social security board in Washington," Ferguson said. "This is not the first time my office has received such complaints regarding investigators for the division of aid for the aged."

Ferguson said the affidavit was given him in Marion yesterday as he addressed a meeting of the Marion County Old Age Pension society.

Karl R. Babb, head of the old age pension division, said he knew nothing of the circumstances reported, but that Ferguson's charges probably were a "gross distortion of facts."

"It appears that the auditor of state has developed a seasonal complex in asking for investigations," Babb said, recalling campaign claims of Ferguson last autumn that the White House had ordered investigation of the state old age pension system— an investigation which did not materialize.

Babb said records of his division were always open to investigation "by responsible authorities."

the dense jungles of New Georgia was the first reported by the Allies since the successful campaign against Buna in New Guinea. The Japanese are making a determined though hopeless fight for this strategically important base and it is evident that Gen. MacArthur is overlooking no bets in his drive to capture it.

American bombers were active yesterday over New Britain, New Guinea, the Solomons islands and other Nipponese island outposts in the southwest Pacific.

One formation of heavy bombers protected by a strong fighter escort attacked the Ballale airdrome on Bougainville island in the northern Solomons, setting fires which rose 200 feet high. Twenty-five enemy fighters were encountered in the area, but for some inexplicable reason they avoided battle.

Medium bombers raided enemy shipping off the coast of Cape Gloucester between Borgen bay and Cape Busching, bombing and strafing barge concentrations and shore installations. At least four Jap barges were definitely destroyed and others were damaged or destroyed.

Allied torpedo and dive-bombers also hammered enemy installations at Gasmata on New Britain, but the results could not be observed because of adverse weather.

Strategy Change In Pacific Indicated

WASHINGTON — (INS) — A change in American Pacific strategy today was in prospect from the present "island-to-island" warfare to a campaign of quick thrusts against scattered key positions held by the Japanese.

Such was the interpretation placed on Secretary of the Navy Knox's statement that it was "not reasonable to assume that the method being pursued will be the one of the future."

The announcement that Maj. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift had been promoted to lieutenant general and placed in command of the first Marine Amphibious Corps indicated that the new plans for the war against the Japanese already are under way.

The change was significant in view of the fact that Vandegrift led the marines in the invasion of Japanese-held Guadalcanal nearly a year ago.

PLAINTS ASKED

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Ohio laundries, hard pressed by manpower shortages and increased operating costs, were advised today by officials of the Office of Price Administration, War Labor Board and War Manpower Commission to submit details of their individual problems.

Laundry representatives asked that the industry be declared essential, and that it be permitted to raise wages and prices.

A minister, friend of former Vice-President Charles P. Dawes, declares that Mr. Dawes was very faithful in church attendance while in Washington, that he failed to attend his church only twice during his term of office. On one of these Sundays he spoke in a Philadelphia church; on another, he sat in a pew of his negro barber's church.

One when thinks of how a busy man like Mr. Dawes considered the importance of faithful church attendance, what excuse can the rest of us give for not being faithful to the church, too? Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY? —D. CARL YODER

A survey of 135 Methodist colleges recently made showed that they favor the setting up of a world-wide co-operative system of student exchanges after the war.

Every minister of a local church and every lay officer now has a special responsibility for informing and educating the public with respect to the exemptions available to income tax payers for contributions to religious, educational and charitable purposes, according to a Federal Council spokesman.

A membership of 67,327,719 persons, representing 50.3 per cent of the total population of the continental United States, is reported by 256 religious bodies in the Yearbook of American churches for 1943. This is the highest proportion of church members ever reported in the total population, which is 133,952,672 persons, as estimated by the Federal Bureau of the Census for Jan. 1, 1942. Both the total number of religious bodies and the number of members are the largest ever reported in any religious census or other compilation.

During the past year, 871 Japanese-American young people from West Coast relocation centers have been placed in American colleges and universities by the National Student Relocation Council, according to C. V. Hibbard, director of the Council, addressing a conference of the Japanese-American Citizens League in New York City. At least 900 other young people should be allowed to enter schools and colleges by Oct. 1. To do all this for a year will require a minimum budget of $250,000.

Lifeboats and rafts are being supplied with New Testaments by the American Bible society. The books are packed in waterproof containers, and tests have revealed that they will continue dry even after being submerged in salt water for days at a time. Already the society has received orders for the complete equipping of approximately 1,000 ships, requiring 8,790 Testaments.

The man of influence and power is the one that regards duty of first importance. So many calls for service weigh heavily upon those who take responsibility seriously. Sometimes there is confusion as to which to answer first. Carlyle has given a good rule to follow: "Do the nearest duty to thee, which thou knowest to be thy duty. The second will at once become clear."

Too Much Occupied.

A little lad paused at the window for a last look at the starry heavens before he said his good-night prayers. "Mummy, will I go to heaven some time?" "Yes, dear, if you love Jesus." "And will you be there?" he asked again. "I hope so, and Daddy'll be there, too." The little fellow shook his head emphatically. "My Daddy won't be there; he couldn't leave the store."—H. E. Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, JULY 31, 1943.

Last day to buy your July War bond!

Drive carefully tomorrow—especially between midnight and daylight.

Doesn't it seem odd—not to have to buy coffee when you don't need it!

Help Protect Victory Gardens

MANSFIELD'S comparative freedom from reports of thefts from Victory gardens may reflect the high quality of citizenship in this community or may result from early warning by the police department and courts that such offenses would subject offenders to severe punishment.

It must be recognized that the time, labor and monetary outlay that have gone into this year's Victory gardens make owners more than ordinarily resentful of trespass or pilfering, and it must also be taken into account that products of one's own garden attain value in excess of market price—as, for instance, the first highly prized ripe tomato, the first "mess" of roasting ears, and the like.

Some cities are already reporting instances of theft from Victory gardens and the Detroit News rather drastically asserts: "If the legislature were in session, we should advocate a specific law imposing 10-year sentences for Victory garden thefts."

This follows comment on a cabled report from Moscow about trouble there, and in other Russian cities, with pilfering of garden produce. It appears that military courts deal with such occurrences in Russia and that 32 cases have been dealt with, prison sentences of from one to two years having been imposed on convicted culprits, under a special wartime decree.

Many Victory gardens are necessarily located where their owners cannot keep constant watch over them, but it is unlikely that thefts can be committed without other than the guilty persons knowing of it. "Good neighbor" obligations would seem to include a display of interest in vicinity gardens, to the extent of preventing depredations whenever possible and to report to the police if any suspicious characters are observed prowling around in the neighborhood.

Study Airport Financing

FAILURE of other members of city council to attend Thursday night's meeting of the finance committee, for discussion of the airport project, cannot be construed as lack of interest in the subject, or as neglect of duty.

Immediate need is for complete understanding of financial problems involved in acquiring the land required for airport expansion, under terms of the federal grant of $600.000 to establish a modern airport here.

This matter is in the hands of the finance committee, for study and recommendation. The fact that one member of the finance committee was absent from the Thursday evening meeting is understandable, as conflicting engagements cannot always be avoided. It may also be noted that seven of the nine members of council met in caucus the preceding evening.

Another meeting of the finance committee is scheduled for next Monday evening, with city officials and other members of council invited to attend. There will be an advantage, of course, in having as many of these present as find it possible to attend, so that they may become familiar with developments in advance of Tuesday evening's regular council meeting, at which it is planned to take action in furtherance of the airport project.

Fewer Cans and Less Fats

COMPLAINT is made that housewives do not turn in enough tin cans and grease. A reader protests that the complaint is not justified. At first there were plenty of tin cans, some already in baskets awaiting disposal. Lately fewer cans have been used. The point system causes the housewife to buy fresh foods instead, and now victory gardens are coming into bearing.

The same thing happens with fats. Time was when a lump of suet came with the pot roast—but no longer. Time was when there was plenty of butter for baking. Bacon and chicken fat could be given the government. Now less bacon is used, gravies are eaten to the last drop, chicken fat makes the biscuits which go with the chicken. Where a family could easily gather up half a pound or more a week, now it's unusual to have more than a couple of spoonfuls in the bowl.

The reader is doubtless right. It becomes, therefore, more important than ever to save the bits and spoonfuls for the war, and conscientious housewives are already doing it. It is important that those families who have not taken the time or trouble to save fat should start turning it in.

Where's That 'Use Tax' Stamp?

AT LONG LAST," as a retiring king once put it, the government seems to be getting around to the point of regarding payment of $5 for a "use tax" stamp compulsory instead of voluntary.

Other cities have been reporting a surprised look on the face of motorists who were summoned to "appear and show cause" for failing to display a stamp evidencing payment of the "use tax," but only within the past day or two has any enforcement effort been observed in the Mansfield area.

It is understood that the alibi, "I had a stamp but it came off when the car was washed," is not being accepted.

Workers Who 'Like Their Job'

WHAT makes a good workman? Well, one very important factor is whether he is satisfied with his job. And satisfaction depends a good deal on treatment and the spirit of the place where he works. The pay counts, but is not all-important.

"It is by no means the rule," according to a study made of this matter, "that low pay means high turnover of workers." In fact, the pay and the treatment may be about equally important.

According to an Oxford savant, Hitler is influenced by "hysteria, persecutory mania, compulsory psychosis and messianic megalomania"—which in simpler form, means that he's a "nut."

Preliminary to rationing, liquor sales in Michigan have been called off for a couple of weeks—thus giving patrons time to get in condition to fill out the applications.

Congressmen Find Public Bitter Over Food Situation In Country

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Letters to friends in Washington from congressmen now at home mending their fences report a very widespread bitterness about the food situation. Beef is the one item most mentioned from most states in these letters. But even these are mild compared to letters from areas where canning was an important industry. The word "was" instead of "is" because many of the letters report reduced canning and even no canning because of government restrictions.

Bitterness about canning is directed at what the critics describe as stupidity. But the bitterness about beef is more serious in that it indicates a widespread belief that the government is simply lying to the people about it. What occasioned this, apparently, were the recent statements that we were getting more beef than normal.

"Where is my share of this beef?" demanded a letter from a questioner on a recent Washington radio forum.

"If the people had been told," one Democratic congressman wrote sadly to a friend, "that the beef was needed for our fighting allies they would gladly have made the sacrifice. But when the government tells the people that no beef is being sent to foreign countries for lend-lease, and that there is more beef than normal, then they simply do not believe it.

"It is no good," he went on, "to tell them that wage earners are making such big money now that THEY are buying up the beef, especially the best cuts. In the first place a lot of the sorest people are the wage earners. Regardless of what they earn they find it almost impossible to buy beef. So they suspect. Just what they suspect they do not really know, but when John Smith figures out a theory he tells it to Jim Brown, and pretty soon everybody in three counties thinks Smith's theory is the answer."

APPARENTLY, from the letters "John Smith's theory" is one thing in Wisconsin, another recognizable in Oklahoma. But all these theories so far reported have one thing in common—they all blame the government, and they all include the point that the government, so far as beef is concerned, is lying to the people for some purpose of its own.

A senator who is noted for his skill at keeping "both ears to the ground" is concerned at the reaction which he now figures will come as soon as big food shipments begin to pour into occupied countries.

"In my state," he wrote, "there has been quiet grumbling at reports that the Lehman organization is buying up a stockpile of supplies to be rushed in as soon as our troops have cleared the country of opposition. I don't think our people want anybody abroad to starve, or freeze, but a lot of them are saying that charity begins at home.

"Even worse, from a political standpoint, is an increasing doubt that there is any sound business judgment in Washington. They wonder about these stockpiles. One man told me he had bought a pair of shoes from Sears, Roebuck right after Roosevelt was elected, in 1932, which were left over from the war department stockpile of shoes from 1918. He said bitterly that this big supply of shoes had been hanging over the market all during the depression."

Note: The writer checked this last statement. The last shoes from World war one were sold by Sears Roebuck in 1938.

Listen World!

Home or Road House?

IS YOUR HOME a free-for all? Is anyone welcome to share your family circle, borrow your best socks and small change, use your guest room, your long distance phone and your beer supply?

Or do you believe in "drawing the line," as Grandpa did—admitting to your home only those who meet your personal standards?

Old-fashioned questions? Maybe. But they can become plenty pertinent—as the Eltons have discovered.

The Eltons are a grand couple . . . good-looking, lively, generous . . . in their early thirties . . . with a swell little place, just a short run out of town. Not much money—but Helen's a wizard at managing, and Dan's a marvelous host.

AT FIRST, when they moved to the city, things had seemed a bit slow. They'd counted a lot on that move. Back home, the old folks had been pretty fussy. Grandpa and Gramma didn't "hold with the young folks gadding around—dragging perfect strangers into the home." Visiting — reasoned Gramma — cost money, took a lot of time and trouble. Most folks weren't worth it. Besides, you oughtta be choosey about those you invite into your home."

Naturally, this seemed a dreary philosophy to friendly young Dan and Helen. Just wait until they were married—they'd show 'em!

And "show 'em" they speedily did. Dan started with a couple of fellows from the office. They in turn had wives, sisters, pals, in no time at all, the Eltons were the center of a Grand crowd.

Visits were no longer occasional occurrences—someone dropped in nightly. Week-ends became regular jamborees. They surely were having One Swell Time.

OF COURSE, it had its drawbacks. Now and then they'd realize that they hadn't read a decent book in months . . . hadn't had a quiet evening together for ages. And it was certainly surprising how the bills mounted—groceries, cigarets, gin, all that extra laundry!

"Aw, shucks — they're a good gang and worth it," grinned Dan—deciding he could make the old overcoat do another season.

Helen loyally agreed — even while ruefully eyeing the cigaret burns on her best linen, the rings on the nicest tables.

So it went. With each party, the crowd seemed larger—there were more strange faces. And—you couldn't deny it — some of these New Eggs were certainly tough babies. Helen squirmed at bawdy stories . . . Dan writhed under voluptuous embraces from un-introduced brunets. Centerville was never like this.

Then the inevitable happened. A party broke up in a drunken brawl — men breaking chairs—girls screeching with hysteria — someone pulling a gun. A neighbor phoned. The door opened to an inquiring cop.

AFTER they'd all left, Helen and Dan sat down—checked up. And found? Their home was a wreck. Their budget was months in the red. Their personal habits and standards were smashed to smithereens. They'd been spending time, money, energy and affection on a mob of rowdies — half of whom they didn't know — all of whom treated their home simply as a convenient hangout . . . and regarded them as SUCKERS!

Not a very flattering conclusion! But it's a safe bet that nine out of ten Good Fellows would reach the same conclusion if they dared face their own amusement list.

Today, Dan and Helen have liquidated 90 per cent of The Crowd. They are no longer popular. To the contrary, their erstwhile "friends" frankly dub them "tightwads" or "screwy."

But the Eltons don't mind. They have salvaged themselves and their self-respect. They are no longer running a road house—THEY HAVE A HOME, AND BEFORE YOU CAN ENTER THAT HOME, YOU HAVE TO RATE.

So—maybe Grandpa and Gramma weren't such old fossils after all!

Dave Boone Says:

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S fireside chat forum has failed off to a point where it has more than fire. He drove home some great points but, listening to him as one who remembered when a Roosevelt radio speech could stir him from head to toe, I felt let down.

* * *

I wish Franklin would shake off the "I've got to talk carefully so you kiddies can grasp it" manner that's come over him and just trust us to react well to an old time glowing barrage of red hot stuff like he used to.

* * *

It's a shame to see a really great speaker get in so much of the chiding and petulant spirit. Like blaming the press again for contradictory prediction about the wars length when the very cases he cited were cases where the papers merely reported what his own military leaders had said in public utterances.

* * *

And taking so many sarcastic digs at fellow Americans who don't always agree 100 per cent with him in all things.

* * *

This just smudges the vitally important parts of what he says so well and so truly. Wow 'em like you used to, Franklin, and never let 'em think you're sore at anybody except Tojo, Hitler, Mussolini and Republicans.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Italy Shaken By Internal Strife, Seeks Way to Break Nazi Yoke

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMERICAN troops captured Palermo, Sicily's chief city, with hardly more than a skirmish, pressed on eastward to flank the Catania plain and help crush the hard core of Nazi resistance which had stopped the British Eighth army. Everywhere Italian troops gave up quickly, surrendered in droves—grinning.

It was too much for Mussolini.

Fresh-back from Verona, where Hitler had refused his plea for greater German aid unless Italians abandoned all of southern Italy and took up lines along the Po, the shaken, aging Italian Premier called an emergency meeting of his Fascist grand council. For the first time since 1928 it refused to do his bidding.

In a stormy session where Il Duce read the handwriting on the wall, he threatened, pleaded—to no avail. By a vote of 19-7, it was later reported, Il Duce's most trusted henchmen voted to support a resolution of Count Dino Grandi giving all power to the Crown, including command of the armed forces.

Grandi, in the early days of Fascism, had violently attacked Mussolini's politics. Soon Il Duce was to realize how numerous were his enemies, that they included not only those who had good reason to hate him but millions who had screamed "Duce! Duce!" when, three years before almost to a day, he led his countrymen into war.

Il Duce Out

It was a historic day for Italy. After 21 years of Fascism the Rome radio announced to a thunderstruck world that King Victor Emanuel had taken over. Mussolini had "resigned;" his longtime foe Marshal Pietro Badoglio had replaced him as premier.

Thus was revealed the first major crack in the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis and in the structure of Fortress Europa itself.

For once German propaganda Minister Goebbels was without a line. The German radio was silent for hours on the threatened collapse of its junior partner, finally noted that Il Duce had quit because of "ill health."

Reactions In Europe.

A wave of enthusiasm swept Italy—largely based, it appeared, on a desire for peace at any price rather than loyalty to the 71-year-old soldier who had succeeded Mussolini. Mobs stormed Il Duce's newspaper. Joyfully other papers trumpeted their relief at being rid of the Fascist yoke. But in Milan, Fascists battled with Italian troops, spurning the new government's order for blackshirt units to join the regular Italian army.

Italian troops in southern France and the Balkans were called back to help defend Italy. This placed an additional heavy strain on Nazi efforts to guard the southern flank of Fortress Europe.

At Home

OPA's New Line.

In Washington at midweek Chester A. Bowles took over the reins of the Office of Price Administration as general manager. He started out by attacking "pressure groups," and he had a good word for the OPA "professors" which his predecessor Lou Maxon had angrily assailed. No competent business concern could do business without the services of professors and economists, Bowles declared.

"OPA must be willing to stand up against selfish pressures," he observed. "Always remember this: Every industrial profiteer, every farm credit speculator, everyone who wants a bigger share than his neighbor would like to see OPA wiped out tomorrow."

Wallace's Words.

While industrialist Henry Ford looked on, Vice President Henry A. Wallace chalked a message on a new Willow Run bomber: "Good luck to this ship and the men who fly it."

Afterwards he addressed 14,000 Detroiters at a meeting sponsored by labor and civic groups, said:

ON PEACE

"We will not be satisfied with a peace which will merely lead us from the concentration camps and mass murder of fascism into an international jungle of gangster governments operated behind the scenes by power-crazed, money-mad imperialists."

"We know that imperialistic free-booters using the United States as a base can make another war inevitable."

ON DEMOCRACY

"We cannot fight to crush Nazi brutality abroad and condone race riots at home . . . We cannot plead for equality of opportunity for peoples everywhere and overlook the denial of the right to vote for millions of our own people."

ON LABOR

"Labor is beginning to do its part in enlightening the public. It is beginning to make crystal clear that 97 per cent of labor has cooperated 300 per cent with our government in the war effort."

ON CAPITAL

"I believe in our democratic, capitalistic system, but it must be a capitalism of abundance and full employment . . . The average man of America knows that we can make and consume all goods which make for a higher standard of living."

Progressive groups approved the speech, some leaders seeing a bid for support by the vice president against conservative foes in the Democratic party.

Abroad

Churchill Warns Italy.

On Tuesday Winston Churchill rode through cheering throngs to speak on the war to the house of commons.

It was a far cry from his "blood, sweat and tears" speech soon after Dunkirk when Mussolini was preparing his stab in the back. Now, though not so memorable, Prime Minister Churchill's words similarly guided a bewildered Britain—this time toward what seemed like certain triumph, at least so far as Italy was concerned.

Italy, he declared, "will be seared and scarred and blackened from one end to the other" unless the new government abandons Germany's war against the United Nations.

Orders to exert the "utmost rigors of war" against Italy had gone out to Allied commanders, Churchill said.

Pointing out that no overtures of peace had been received from Mussolini's successors at the time he spoke, he observed: "I know little or nothing of the new government. I express no opinion upon it."

Battle on the Plains.

Joseph Stalin has a better record as a military commander than Adolf Hitler. When the Russian premier this week journeyed from Moscow to the Orel front to take command, Red army soldiers smashed more than five miles deeper into the salient.

Using the Nazi-developed encirclement technique, the Russians were driving wedges north and south of Orel, trying to force a junction back of the key Nazi-held city.

Farther south on the 2,000-mile Russian front, that this week saw active fighting virtually along its entire length, Russian troops had restored the Belgorod line to the original positions held before the Nazi offensive. Berlin reported Russian assaults at Lake Ladoga, and on other Leningrad fronts, in the Caucasus and a landing on the Black Sea coast.

Stalin claimed the unsuccessful German drive had cost the Nazis 70,000 dead; 65 per cent of the tanks that launched the offensive were said to have been destroyed.

Yanks Feel Their Wings.

A navy fighter-bomber wheeled in the skies over Munda, then streaked downward like a halfback hammering toward the goal line. Inside the ship, as the wind screamed and tore at the wings and fuselage, A.P. war correspondent Lief Erickson clung to a metal frame support and caught fleeting glimpses of what went on below.

He saw, as his own plane and others of the formation unloaded a total of 186 tons of bombs, the biggest raid of the Pacific war so far, a raid that brought nearer the end of Munda as a Japanese base.

From the pitiful little Allied air force that had existed at Bataan little more than a year and a half ago, had come a fleet of awesome power. In this record raid on Munda, 200 planes took part; they slammed at ammunition dumps and military installations close upon the destruction wrought by Allied warships that stood offshore and lobbed shells into the heart of the base.

Quotes

Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary: "Once the enemy is beaten into unconditional surrender, we are firmly determined to deprive him once and for all of the means of doing harm."

Harold Gilmore, soldier in North Africa: "America has come to mean a great deal more to me than when I was living in it and taking it all for granted. It never struck me as it does now how great our country is and what a privilege it is to be an American."

In Short

Arraigned: In Ogden, Utah, Austin Cox, 38, charged with slaying five Ogden residents on a shotgun spree.

Anniversary: Henry Ford was 80 years old yesterday. "The important thing is to keep going," he said.

Celebrated: At Washington, D. C., the 35th anniversary of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Born: At Hollywood, to Mrs. John Garfield, wife of the film star, a six-pound son, and to screenstar Lana Turner a seven-pound daughter.

Died: At London, 71-year-old Lord Wedgwood, advocate of a union of Great Britain and the United States.

Farmer's Diary

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

OUR SECTION of country is well supplied with neat Grange halls, equipped with curtained stages, musical instruments and basement kitchens. Our local Grange hall was originally the "little white schoolhouse on the corner."

My wife and I are frequently invited to open meetings of the Grange in surrounding localities. The other evening we spent as guests of a group ten miles from home.

Pressure of farm work made the opening late. It was after ten before the members had arrived. A surprising number of young folks were present. They helped with the program. Several "spoke pieces," and teen age young people joined their elders in putting on a play. Even against the protests of her mother, the young bride, on the marriage eve "ditched" the craven groom her mother favored and, through the wise connivance of her father, substituted the young man of her own choice just in time for the ceremony.

The program over, we all were invited to the basement dining room for light refreshments. Here the air was cool and fresh. Damp meadow odors and those of growing corn and ripening grain. I noticed with surprise, that the place had a marble floor . . . and remarked about it to my nearest neighbor.

"Oh yes," he said. "Concrete is the common thing—too common for us. The real explanation is that the mausoleum is our village cemetery was condemned because it had no fire escape! So our Grange bought it and moved the materials here. . . .!

"But why put the costliest part on the floor?" I wondered.

"Because there wasn't enough to go all around," he explained blandly. "You see there wasn't any architect, but there were plenty of Jacks-of-all-trades in our crowd. We did the job ourselves, labor all donated, and expense for materials taken from our treasury. It may be that's one reason why the whole community likes to come here. Every farmer for miles around had a hand in helping build this social center."

I suppose the Grange has taught more farmers to co-operate than any other single institution.

HOUR OF GRACE + + +

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

(Copyright, 1943)

CHAPTER XIV

Adele was sitting with her long brown legs crossed under a tree near the tennis courts. She wore her customary practical but unbecoming costume for the game—a pair of blue shorts and a white cotton blouse. Seeing Meegan slight, neat figure in white approach, Adele arose, the muscles in her agile body and lean, ugly face seeming to tighten.

She said, "Hi! Have you dried out yet? Lord, am I tired of staying in? How goes it with you, pal?" But she was thinking other things . . .

"I'm still a little sleepy," Meegan said. She was very sleepy indeed and she had a full day ahead with two trips to the beach with the children. "Let's start playing. I have only an hour, you know."

They played several games hard and well. In sports Adele ceased to be ugly and gauche and became a fleet, graceful person with a perfectly co-ordinated body. In years gone by they had often played to a gallery and heads had turned first to the delicate, fair figure of Meegan to the fleet, dark, muscular Adele. Adele won this morning as she usually did. She played as though the ball were something to be avenged with a deadly accuracy.

They went to the shade of the big tree and dried their faces.

"That was swell," Adele said. "I thought I'd be rusty. You have time for a cigaret, haven't you? Oh, I forgot. You've stopped. Well, sit down and get your breath. I'm winded."

Meegan sat down on the grass, stretching her legs before her, hoping that Adele would not want to talk about Clare. But if Adele did not talk about Clare and the life Jerry might have had, she had nothing to talk about. Hating Clare and loving Jerry filled her life. They were the essence of her.

Adele said, "The old cats are at it again and also the young cats. Naturally you and your mother will be the last to hear. About Toby and Clare, I mean. They don't care enough about decency to be discreet about it. A lot of wild stories are circulating. I don't care what they say about Clare, but Toby is your brother and somewhere in him there's good stuff. Now I'm a cat—because what can you do about it?"

Meegan's brows, darker than her hair, came together. "What are they saying?"

"Well, they think that Fayne is either smart or a darned fool. He's no darned fool, not that one! One of your mother's dearest friends saw Toby and Clare in a cocktail lounge in town last week. They kissed each other several times until the manager came over and politely but frigidly asked them to stop. And it seems that a good many people are getting their summer entertainment chiefly by noting when Toby goes to Clare's and when he leaves. There aren't house guests there all the time, you know!" She drew in deeply on her cigaret and said, "Wouldn't it be funny if she really loved Toby! But I don't think she does. Apparently, though, she doesn't care two pins for the good will of anyone here. She didn't come back to make a big social splash. She came back to get Toby. She'll ruin him . . ."

Meegan said, "Maybe he'll ruin her . . . Oh, I hate it, Adele! Our last summer here, probably, turned into a whispering campaign against us. I'd like to run away from it. I'd like to run away from all my feelings and look for new ones."

"I'm a heel to worry you. I guess I've said all the vile things about her I can say. But why doesn't she get caught sometime? Why don't some of the things she's done catch up with her and slap her down? Why does she always get away with it? She just seems to go on to bigger and better things."

"I hope I find out what she really is. We've never known."

"I know what she is. Shall I tell you? She's a murderer and nothing less than her own physical liquidation will make it right. It isn't only Toby either. It's Van, too. Yes, Van . . . He met her in town for lunch one of those rainy days last week. Wouldn't Sue die if she knew it? But who's going to tell her? A man with a wife and two children just doesn't take his old flame to lunch even if she is married. That sort of thing isn't done in our circle. You know that. Van had to call Clare and invite her without Sue's knowing. He had to want to see Clare so much that he was willing to risk Sue's temper."

"I hope I know what she is before the summer is over . . ."

"You keep saying that. I told you what she is." Rising, she grinned. "I'm going in for a swim. You know, I'm beginning to get the urge to do something for defense. If anyone could take the place of a man in industry, I can. Do you feel what I feel? That while we play tennis and swim and gossip great forces are at work to change everything we've known. No matter what our personal lives are now or our personal problems there is one bigger thought in the center of our beings . . . Winning the war. I think our consciences are outraged and our bones, by Gar, want to go to work to win it!"

Meegan nodded. "Maybe one of the good things about war is that it's a leveler and that when we're in it and know we have to win it, it will be as though the whole country were one heart and one pulse and one strong body. A mother from a high place with a son in the service and a mother from a low place with a son in the service are equals for the first time. They can either be brave together or cry together but they are together." She smiled. "We do talk, don't we?"

Adele said, "I wish I could feel that Clare was so insignificant in this bigger thing I wouldn't think about her any more. But that's an old score to be settled, too, just as the war is."

Meegan walked home and went to her room and changed into a blue bathing suit and yellow sweater. She did not see Toby and took it for granted that he was still asleep. Finding the car keys on the hall table, she took them and went out again, waving to her mother who was in the garden cutting perennials for the house. For there were only faithful perennials in the garden now and they seemed, despite gross neglect, considerably revived after the rain.

She stopped at Sue's house first and blew the horn. The two children rushed out with their sand buckets and shovels and climbed into the car. Then Sue, looking as unruffled as always, came out and stood by the car.

"They are so pleased they can go," she said. "How are you, dear?"

"Fine . . . if a little housebound," Meegan said.

Sue hesitated an instant. Then, "Have you seen Clare?"

"Not since her party. Have you?"

"No, and I don't think I'm going to. There's too much drinking there . . . Susan, darling, put down your feet. You know you are not allowed to put your feet on the upholstery of our car and you're a guest in Meegan's . . . Clare left this morning, by the way, with her husband and secretary. I took Van to the station and saw them pass."

"Perhaps they went away for the week-end." So that was why Toby was staying home today.

Sue said slowly and doubtfully, "Perhaps. But why did they take the secretary? Perhaps I'm provincial but it doesn't seem to me that they have a normal family life. Don't you agree with me?"

Sue wanted her to tell her what she knew of Clare . . .

"I suppose you'd say their lives are cosmopolitan," she said carefully." It's natural we should think them different."

"Even so," Sue said, "I still think it was odd to see them going away and taking the secretary with them and for Clare's head to be on her husband's shoulder . . . But I won't keep you any longer. We must get together for a bridge foursome . . ."

She smiled at her children and Meegan and then turned and went back into her perfect house and her perfect life.

Meegan drove next door to the Lesters and blew the horn again. Presently Helen Lester came out leading her small daughter by the hand.

"Hi!" she called vigorously, her round, rouged face smiling, her curls in motion with her thick body that was dressed in a multicolored pinafore. "In you go, kids. Now be good. Don't give Miss McLean any trouble." She leaned against the window of Meegan's car. "You'd never guess what Erica was doing a couple of minutes ago. Or would you? She was talking to your brother and making a date with him for tonight. I didn't know she knew him! These kids these days . . . Anyway, I think it's swell. She hasn't had any fun. You know, I've got a sneaking suspicion that you had something to do with it."

Meegan looked as puzzled as she looked pleased. "I had nothing to do with it, I promise you."

"Okay, I was wrong. That's even better. Maybe the summer won't be such a wash-out to Erica after all."

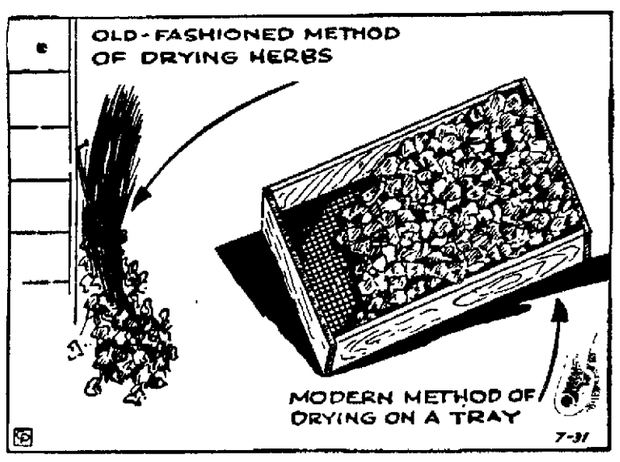
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Harvesting Herbs From Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Assn.)

VICTORY gardeners will find that herb leaves can be used green in many ways during their growing season. For winter use herbs are dried and stored. The leaves and tender tips are used for this purpose.

American housewives used to hang a bunch of herbs from the kitchen rafters or from a nail driven into the side of a shed wall, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. In either case, heat from a wood stove, usually the kitchen stove, was depended upon to dry the herbs. This in itself was a decorative method, but the dust that collected upon them did not improve the taste of the herbs.

Today the preferred method is to spread the leaves on a tray, as illustrated in the Garden-Graph, cover them with a cheesecloth (for sanitation) and let them dry indoors.

The tray can be the four sides of a garden flat with the bottom covered with screening instead of wood and when filled with herb leaves it should be propped up so that the air can circulate. If the tray is well shaken each morning all the leaves are sure to get air.

After permitting the leaves to dry for two or three days, the herbs are placed in mason jars or any close-topped container.

Certain herbs such as parsley, sweet basil, sweet marjoram and chives can be potted and kept growing in the house all winter, providing the pots are placed where they will get sun.

War Plants Using Split-Hour Shift to Get More Women

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Split shifts in war industries are becoming common to white-collar day workers in offices and teaching positions.

"Breaking the ice" in hiring workers of this kind was The Warner & Swasey company, leading machine tool makers, whose officials said they would have laughed at the idea a few months ago. There are 700 women in the factory.

A representative split shift is one in which one worker comes in at 4 p. m. and works until 8, when he is relieved by his team-mate, who works until midnight. An arrangement is made between them to alternate 8-hour days on Saturdays and Sundays. They also arrange for an 8-hour shift if the other worker is unable to show up on a given day.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Home Service Nutrition Center Offers Housewives Canning Help

Display to Show Produce Processed By More Popular Methods.

Housewives of this community will be extended a special invitation to inspect "The Gas Company's Five Foot Shelf of Wartime Canned Foods" which will be on display in the Nutrition Center, Park avenue west, at Mulberry street, some time next week.

This unusually attractive and informative display has been designed to assist homemakers with their home canning problems. It provides display space for actual specimen of fruits and vegetables processed by the most popular home methods.

This processing is done in the Gas Company experimental kitchens under the supervision of Mrs. Pauline Treisch, the organization's Home Service director. Methods used are water bath, pressure cooker, open kettle and oven canning; dehydration or drying method, and pickling and preserving.

Fruits and vegetables are canned just prior to the height of their season so that the display is kept timely and illustrative of the different methods for processing various foods.

This display is an accessory to the all-out food preservation program to assist housewives with their home canning problems which was launched by the Gas Company at the beginning of the canning season. Every phase of home food processing is being covered in this 'Victory Garden to Pantry Shelf" program which includes, for instance, a series of demonstrations which will be given on request before interested groups. Arrangements for these demonstrations may be made by phoning Mrs. Pauline Treisch at the Gas Company.

Individual problems and questions about home canning and all phases of food preservation will be answered at the Home Service Nutrition Center by Mrs. Treisch or by qualified members of several local women's clubs, who are donating their services to this worthwhile project as a contribution to the war effort on the home front.

Hundreds of housewives are receiving helpful information through a number of bulletins and pamphlets available here which contain hints on problems of nutrition, meal planning, buying under point rationing, home canning and other important wartime food problems. This material is published by the Home Service department of the Gas Company, and is gathered from authoritative sources, condensed and presented in an easy-to-read style.

The new canning book, "Home Food Preservation In Wartime," for instance, is proving extremely popular among housewives in this community. This attractive 16-page booklet, printed in three colors, contains information on all phases of home food preservation and complete canning time table charts for all fruits and vegetables.

In order to further stimulate interest in food preservation, the Gas Company is offering liberal cash prizes and hundreds of premium ribbons in a "Canning Fair" to be held late in September. While details of the big canning contest have not yet been completed, it will be open to all customers of the Ohio Fuel Gas Company and awards will be made in a variety of classifications.

Mrs. Treisch suggests, then, that housewives set aside their "best" jars for entry in this contest and watch the News-Journal for more complete details.

This attractive and informative home canning display may soon be seen in the Home Service Nutrition Center located in the showroom of the Ohio Fuel Gas company, Park avenue west at Mulberry street. Modeled after the famous Dr. Eliot's Five Foot Shelf, it will display fruits and vegetables processed by the more popular home methods.

INEXPENSIVE FLOORS HAVE LUXURY LOOK

Home Interiors Recommends Asphalt Tile by Armstrong.

Shortages of help both in business houses and in private homes is making popular any product that suggests economy of time and effort.

Armstrong's Asphalt Tile used for floor covering which combines practicality with beauty, is one of these. For all the attention this floor requires is routine sweeping, occasional washing and waxing and it gives years of trouble free service without need of costly refinishing.

It is interesting to note, too, that the inevitable cigaret and match scars can easily be removed and constant traffic and sliding desks and chairs won't mar its beauty. This is true because the colors run right through to the back so they can't grow dim or rub off.

Armstrong's Asphalt Tile, in all of its 41 plain and marble colorings, is available in Mansfield at Home Interiors, 86 N. Main, where an appointment may be made for a decorator to discuss your personal problem of floor covering and an estimate may be given.

Among many attractive and serviceable floors in Mansfield installed by Home Interiors of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile are those in Sutter's, corner of Main and Fourth, the Holly Shop, 64-68 N. Main, Anderson's Naborhood Store, corner of Fourth and Rowland, The Eagles' Club and the general offices of the Dominion Electric Manufacturing Inc.

Of particular interest to restaurants, commercial kitchens, lunch rooms and other areas where spillage of grease, fats or oils is a problem, Armstrong's Greaseproof Asphalt Tile is a welcome solution. This material is now available in many of the colorings of the regular asphalt line." And furthermore, " Mr. Frank Bunsey, of Home Interiors states," Armstrong's Greaseproof Asphalt Tile has the same resistance to moisture and alkalais as the regular line, permitting its use of basement concrete subfloors."

Bunsey also recommends a specially compounded asphalt tile for extra heavy commercial and industrial use which is available in seven plain and marble colorings, four sizes and four practical thicknesses.

"In fact," Bunsey says, "wherever low cost floors with a luxury look are desired, Armstrong has the answer."

ARMY PLANES BRING OFFICERS TO WEDDING

Fellow Officers of Lieut. Robert Neese Fly From Columbus, Miss., To Attend Steil-Neese Nuptial Ceremony.

FIVE FAST army planes roared into Mansfield yesterday afternoon, bringing a group of fellow officers of Lieut. Robert Neese, for his wedding tonight to Miss Katherine Steil, which will be an event at the Grace Episcopal church. The closed service is scheduled for 8:30.

Lieut. William A. Smith of Fort Riley, Kansas, met Lieut. Neese in Columbus. They arrived in Mansfield by car Thursday night. Officers who flew in yesterday afternoon were Capt. Robert N. Wilkinson, Capt. Robert E. Wade, Capt. J. D. Gard, Capt. J. L. Maher, Capt. John R. Rice, Lieut. Howard C. Pullen, Lieut. William Day and Lieut. Charles J. Knowles. The officers, with Lieut. Neese are staying at the Westbrook Country club.

Three of the officers will attend Lieut. Neese at the wedding. They are Capt. Wilkinson, Capt. Wade and Lieut. Knowles. Other attendants of Lieut. Neese are Robert C. Pickett of Columbus, Robert Pugh of Cincinnati and Edward T. Neese, a brother of Columbus.

Attendants of Miss Steil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Steil, Pinecrest, will be Miss Joanna Neese, sister of the prospective bride-groom, and Miss Dorothy Tobin of Glenn Ridge, N. J., and Miss Sterling Nettles of Ashville, N. C., former classmate of the bride-elect.

TWO KILLED, 3 HURT AS CARS CRASH HEAD-ON

Girl, 18, and Man Are 10th And 11th Traffic Accident Victims of Year.

the Milliron auto crashed head-on into the Rush machine as Rush was making, or was about to make, a left hand turn into the grounds of the Roxy inn. Officers did not immediately establish whether the Rush car was waiting in or near the center lane for traffic to pass or whether he had already started driving into the tavern grounds.

When he reached the scene, Hurst said he found Mr. and Mrs. Rush lying on the pavement. Both had been thrown out of the car while the Logan boy, apparently sleeping at the time of the crash, remained in the back seat.

Milliron was found partly out of the car with his feet on the running board. His daughter was crushed between the seat and the windshield and was dead when removed from the wreckage.

Mr. and Mrs. Rush, the Logan boy and the dead girl's father were rushed to General hospital in ambulances.

Rush died of a skull fracture two hours after being received at the hospital Mrs. Rush who received a skull fracture and fractured right leg, is in a critical condition, hospital attaches said. Blood transfusions were resorted to last night in order to save her life.

Milliron suffered a leg fracture and the Logan boy received head injuries. Both are expected to recover.

The Logan boy had been visiting his grandparents and last night they were driving home after a visit with the youth's parents on Cedar street.

Last night's accident was another chapter in a series of tragedies in both the Rush and Milliron families.

Parents of nine children now, Mr. and Mrs. Rush lost two sons in an accident 21 years ago less than two miles from last night's accident scene where Mr. Rush was fatally injured the boys, Clyde and William, were riding bicycles near what is now the Erie underpass when they were struck by an automobile and fatally injured.

In the Milliron family, the Milliron's girl's grandmother, Mrs. Horace Cook was gored to death by an enraged bull last June 9 on the Cook farm in Springfield township.

The body of Miss Milliron was taken to the Jones Memorial to await funeral arrangements which are pending the arrival of a half sister, Miss Bernice McBride who left Mansfield early this week for Alameda, Cal., to enter training in the WAVES.

A graduate of Springfield township high school last June Miss Milliron is survived by her father her stepmother, a sister Mrs. Robert Dean of Shelby, and her stepsister Also surviving are her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Milliron and a grandfather, Horace Cook

She was born Dec 17 1924 and was a member of the Ontario Community church

Rites for Mr Rush were also incomplete today due to the critical condition of Mrs Rush

A lathing contractor farmer and more recently employed at the Barnes Manufacturing company, Mr Rush was born Sept 7 1878 in Jeromesville He came to Richland county 40 years ago and has resided on Lewis road just east of Ontario

Besides his widow Lottie he is survived by three sons Robert E Wayne L. and Orie A all of Mansfield six daughters Mrs A le Hyman Mrs. Arthur Chambers Mrs Frank Logan, Miss Wilma Rush all of the Mansfield vicinity; Mrs. Fred Mowers of Lucas and Mrs. Floyd Summers of Massillion. A sister, Mrs Minnie Keller of Galion and 22 grandchildren also survive.

His body is at the Wappner funeral home

M'GREGOR RAPS OPA THEORISTS

Predicts Complete Breakdown Of System In 'Town Hall' Meeting Here.

the OPA and how they came about.

The fumbling of the OPA in attempting to handle the food problem is in direct contrast to the nation's efficient handling of the production of munitions and essential war materials because the OPA is in the hands of "long-haired theorists while the war production is being directed by practical men who know what they are dong," McGregor said.

What he described as "ill-advised attempts to control production of food and the strangling red tape of government agencies" have permitted demand to get far ahead of supply, threatening inflation, the congressman asserted

A dozen questions on topics ranging from the $25.000 limit on salaries to his attitude toward the federal administration were put to the congressman by labor organizations which had a delegation at the meeting.

He told them he had no apologies to make for vo ing for the Smith-Connally anti-strike bill and against the salary limitation, explaining that he felt labor in the 17th district did not plan to strike to hold up the war program and therefore wouldn't be affected by the bill.

He opposed the salary limitation, he said, because it came under the heading of class legislation and tended to do away with the incentive to work for a high-salaried job.

"Labor generally has been misunderstood in its aims because a few leaders have given the rest of the people the wrong impression of unions and brought on such legislation as the anti-strike measure," McGregor said

After telling McGregor that he was "better than most congressmen although your voting hasn't always pleased us," Norman L. Kellogg, Westinghouse employe and an organizing chairman for the joint CIO-AFL civic committee presented his Army-Navy "E" pin to McGregor "as a token of our appreciation for what you have done and will do and a pledge of Mansfield labor that we will keep on giving our best to the war program."

Overwhelmed for a moment by the presentation, McGregor exclaimed, "Isn't democracy a grand thing!"

Answering questions from the audience, McGregor predicted an increase in the luxury taxes and said congress had considered an all-inclusive income tax to cover the amount the government needs f. this year.

"The only way taxes can be held within reason in war-time is to reduce the cost of non-essentials, slash government agencies, and run the war as economically as possible," he said.

If the 12 billion sought by the government in taxes is raised this year, the nation will be paying 41 per cent of its income to the government, he said. Citing the rising cost of government, he added that there is one federal employe now for every 45 persons in the nation as against one for every 5,300 in Thomas Jefferson's time.

One man wanted something done about the enforcement of the federal use tax law for car owners.

To that, McGregor replied that it is within the power of congress to repeal the tax or enforce it, but it was the understanding of congress that the tax was to be collected on the honor system without "snoopers" to investigate car owners who failed to buy a tax stamp.

It would cost from 40 to 50 million dollars to hire enforcement officers to cover the nation, offsetting most of the advantage in collecting the use tax, he said.

The congressman explained his opposition to the subsidy roll-back program by saying that the food price roll-back as proposed by President Roosevelt would save each person only $4.31 a year while it would require approximately 70,000 federal workers to enforce it, adding a huge additional tax burden.

McGregor, who is conducting personal interviews throughout the 17th district, said he was going to take his findings back to congress with him and "live up to them."

He made a tour of inspection of the Mansfield airport yesterday afternoon and said he was "well pleased" with what he found. He said he would soon confer with Civil Aeronautics authority officials for additional information about the proposed airport expansion program for which a tentative $600,000 government grant was made several weeks ago.

McGregor will complete his interviews at the courthouse this afternoon and go to Delaware for similar meetings Monday.

SEVEN GROCERS CITED AT LIMA

Slaughterer Also Named In OPA Injunction Suit.

TOLEDO —(AP)— Seven Lima grocers and one slaughterer were charged with violating food rationing regulations in an injunction suit filed in federal court yesterday by Edwin J. Lynch, enforcement attorney for the Toledo office of price administration.

Lynch asked that the defendants be enjoined from such violations.

The grocers named were John Vastano, Ernest R. Bonanno, Frank Schenk, Earl Sloan, William L. Koch, Orville Walton and Walter Wright. The slaughterer accused was Perry C. Dirmeyer.

KILLS MOTHER WITH TOMAHAWK

Woman Admits Slaying After Trying To Kill Self.

LOS ANGELES —(AP)— Detective J. C. Dearman said today that Miss Edna McCabe, 51, admitted killing her 81-year-old mother, Mrs. Rowena McCabe, last night with the head of an ancient tomahawk.

The daughter then attempted to commit suicide by stabbing herself 50 times with a hunting knife, he said.

Hospital attendants said the daughter's wounds, with one exception, were superficial.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Aug. 1.

Sunday's horoscope is one of utmost importance fostering and making way for events and issues of major scope and future effect both in private and public life. Great issues may be in the balance, with influential cooperation for ways and means that might effect combinations, mergers and kindred affairs, by clever manipulation of available assets and resources. Probably intuition may be effective or "hunches," but with concentrated, not diffused tactics.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of extraordinary opportunities for securing fortune by clever, shrewd and strange aids or psychic intuitions. But such must be used with finesse.

A child born on this day may have exceptional talents for manipulating big deals of paramount importance through some peculiar power or aid. It may be capable and lucky as well.

For Monday, Aug. 2.

Monday's astrological forecast is for stabilizing and crystallizing important projects already begun under exceptional promise for success. Brilliant ideas and plans may be set in motion now which require sturdy application and industry to put them on a sound and enduring basis. Elders and superiors may be substantially cooperative and strange contacts also may assist.

Those whose birthday it is should devote their most stable and sturdy efforts to putting on a firm and enduring basis, of programs already begun. Some sort of windfall seems to be involved, and requires prudent development for making it enduring, safe and secure. Serious thought and diligence are urged for permanency.

A child born on this day may be serious, prudent, painstaking, with system and detail to attract firm friends and supporters. It should also enjoy its share of good will and good luck.

EX-SPORTSMAN DIES

TOLEDO —(AP)— Funeral services for Lloyd H. Rickart, 72, former Toledo and St. Louis baseball executive, who died in Toledo hospital yesterday after an illness of four years, will be held here Monday.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

'Not the faintest sound," I assured the operator, then fairly held my breath as I heard the ringing of the bell in 1720 where Ruth Hayes was resting. In a moment, the unmistakable accents of the "wilderness woman" were heard in thinly disguised irritation.

"Yes? What is it?"

"Snap out of it!"

I realized the voice giving the crisp command must be that of Milner, but if I had not been forewarned of his telephone call to Ruth, I am not sure I should have recognized it, the curt tone was so different from the usual suave utterances of the Lansfield's manager.

"This is vital!" he was saying, "and I've no time to fool, so listen carefully. Have you seen anything of the highbrow lady Vere de Vere who was your hostess last evening?"

Ruth Is Startled.

"No, not a sign!" Ruth's voice was startled. "Why?"

"Because I haven't been able to see her around here," Milner replied. "The old man is here. I talked to him, and I saw the other dame,—the one whose name begins with 'K'—when I went up to the apartment, asking to see your friend, on the pretense that I had something of great importance to tell her. 'K' gave me the brush-off very smoothly; said her friend had a severe headache, was lying down and couldn't possibly be disturbed. She went out of her way to tell me that the dame had gone out early in the morning on an errand, and that the exercise had aggravated the headache so that she had to go to bed as soon as she returned.

"Now, it isn't like that bunch to volunteer information," he continued," so I began to inquire around, and I found out that she did go out early this morning but nobody saw her come back. Of course it's entirely possible that she may be here all right, but I thought I'd better tip you off to be on the lookout for her."

She'll Look Out.

"I'll look out for her all right!" The "wilderness woman's" voice was venomous. "And she'd better look out for herself if I set my lamps on her. But I don't really believe she's hep to this. That girl wouldn't be likely to tell anybody. That letter of your friend's was really the last word in the kind of slush a girl like that would lap up. I dictated it myself so I ought to know. And you can bet she'd hug it secretly to her heart, and carry out its request without telling anyone."

The venom was gone from her voice now, replaced by that smugness of confidence in her own cleverness which is one of her strongest characteristics.

"Don't be so sure of yourself" Milner snapped. "You may be right about the girl, but I'd feel better if I knew where that woman was. She has a headpiece on her, and she's likely to figure out anything."

"She couldn't figure out a ten-cent jig saw game!" Ruth Hayes retorted, and her voice was snarling with hatred of me. "And I've no doubt she's either sleeping, as her little pal said, or she was simply giving you the brush-off. There isn't a duchess in the world that has her nose in the air higher than that one. If I ever have the chance, I'm going to turn it down for her, and spread it all over her face."

"Cut it out!" There was a whiplash in Milner's voice. "Remember, this isn't anything personal you're doing, and we have no time for your strictly private feuds. What I want you to do is to watch for that woman. If you think she's anywhere around, call the whole thing off. Let the girl cool her heels till she gets tired and leaves. You stay there in your room and have your meals sent up until I see that woman back in her suite and give you the go-ahead signal to get out. And—you'd better not try the other stunt we'd planned."

"Why not?" The "wilderness woman's voice was sullen, as if she were being deprived of something special she had set her heart on.

Slaps Ruth Down.

"Because I tell you not to!" Milner retorted. "And you'd better watch your step in more ways than one. You're showing altogether too much of a tendency to go ahead and decide things on your own. That isn't done with me. You obey orders or else."

"You're not the top," she began sullenly.

"I am as far as you're concerned!" he asserted, with something cold and menacing in his tone. "Kindly remember that."

"Suppose I forget it?" Ruth Hayes asked insolently, with what I felt was a last touch of bravado.

GARDEN CLUB HEARS MISS EMMA WARING

Town and Country Garden Club Meets With Mrs. R. J. Welsh; Mrs. Ralph Emerson Presides at Brief Business Meeting.

MISS EMMA WARING, from the Office of Civilian Defense, was a guest speaker, Friday afternoon at the luncheon meeting of the Town and Country Garden club, held at the home of Mrs. R. J. Welsh, 641 Davis road.

Miss Waring spoke on "Rumors" and "The Black Market." The other afternoon speaker was Mrs. David Shelley who read a paper on "How to Save Seed" prepared by Mrs. LaVerne Henry.

Luncheon was served buffet style from a long table centered with an old fashioned silver cake plate bearing an attractive arrangement of fruit.

Guests were seated at small tables on the terrace, centered with miniature bouquets. Mrs. Wilmot Pierce, an inactive member of the club from Hattiesburg, Miss., poured.

During a brief business meeting Mrs. Ralph Emerson presided. Members sewed for the Red Cross during the afternoon.

Mrs. Henry Paulson will be the guest speaker at the Aug. 13 meeting, which will be held at the home of Mrs. Stuart Cramer, 235 Rowland avenue.

Mrs. T. A. Siegenthaler Has Friday Luncheon Meeting

A COMMITTEE to judge school gardens of the St. Peter's school was appointed yesterday afternoon at the luncheon meeting of the Buckeye Garden club held at the home of Mrs. T. A. Siegenthaler, 57 Braeburn road.

Those appointed were Mrs. Earl Gaar, chairman; Mrs. Deming Lowrey, Mrs. Leonard Hautzenroeder, Mrs. Richard Tappan, Mrs. Charles Spreng and Mrs. Grattan Johnson.

During a business meeting presided over by Mrs. Seigenthaler, vice president, reports were heard from various committee chairmen.

Luncheon was served from a refreshment table centered with a bouquet of mixed garden flowers.

The program of the afternoon was in charge of Mrs. Paul Sturges, jr., who gave a paper on "New Books on Gardening." She gave brief reviews of new books and suggested that club members do not concentrate entirely on vegetables, but grow flowers as well.

Mrs. Gene Zediker, 494 Russel road, will entertain at the Aug. 13 meeting. Mrs. Gilbert Dodson will be in charge of the program.

Johnny Appleseed Club Meets With Mrs. William Weldon

MRS. A. L. SMITH, 593 Coleman road, was hostess, Friday afternoon to members of the Johnny Appleseed Garden club, when they held their regular meeting.

The afternoon's diversion was novel and interesting. Club members brought vegetables and flowers, which they had grown in their own gardens, and using kitchen strainers and other objects of similar shapes, made hats.

Prizes were awarded for the most unique models turned out. Winners were Mrs. William Weldon, Mrs. E. C. Thompson and Mrs. Tom Ford. Prizes were defense stamps.

Luncheon was served at a late hour from a long table centered with orange lilies in a flat bowl, with a background of marigolds, on a yellow dinner cloth. Mrs. David Bristor poured.

The next meeting will be held the 13th of August at the home of Mrs. Louis Hartman.

LESS COLOR.

That "Old Lady Dyestuffs," first to raise a warning finger at the start of the war over the possibility of less color, is at it again. Now it seems that many service uniforms are going to be darker. There is a new dark gray, and a darker navy. And so, civilians will have to be satisfied with less color and lighter colors.

Council Meets At Eagle Hall

The Lady Garfield Council, No. 24, Daughters of America, met last evening for their regular meeting at the Eagle building. Mrs. Theodosia Watts, councilor, was in charge of the business meeting.

During the meeting Mrs. Ann Weaver was installed as associate vice councilor by the deputy, Miss Ida Hunter. The committee for the next meeting was appointed and is headed by Mrs. Della Cochran. A social meeting will follow the regular business session.

Plans have been completed by the organization for the convention to be held in August in Cincinnati.

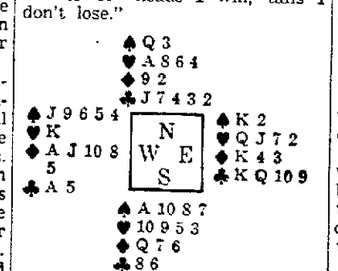
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN NO RISK EXISTS

Refusing to try for extra tricks, by methods which endanger your contract, is ordinarily sound bridge. But failure to seek them, when no risk is involved thereby, is merely foolishness. In the long run, you can pick up quite a number of extra points by doing that, as your finesses, efforts to set up long cards and other devices will pan out part of the time. Points gained that way are "pure velvet" if the attempt for them costs not a solitary thing, but are a clear matter of "heads I win, tails I don't lose."



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 ♦	Pass	3 NT

After the heart A took the first trick and the Q the second, East scored the diamond K, finessed the 10, dropped the Q with the A, ran the rest of the suit, discarding a spade and a heart and then took in the club A, K and Q, plus the heart J, giving up the last two tricks. Having made an extra trick, he looked to his partner for commendation on his soundness, saying first, "I didn't dare try the club finesse after the spades and hearts were unguarded".

There was no need to take any such risk in order to seek an additional extra trick. After scoring on the second trick with the heart Q, the third with the diamond K and the fourth with the finesse of the diamond J, he should have tackled the clubs before he ran the other diamonds. At that time, he had the heart J left for a stopper, and the guarded spade K. The club finesse would have been toward South, who could have done no harm, even if he won that. He could not have led through the spade K. The one extra trick already assured would still have been safe, and the chance for a second extra in clubs would have entailed no danger to even the extra trick.

After the club finesse had worked, the K and Q could have been taken, also the heart J and then the diamond remainders could have been run, making a total of 11 tricks instead of 10.

Signing of Dwight W. (Ike) Trubey as football coach at Tyria high school doesn't rise any particular fear among Mansfield's Tygers at the Elyrians will be tougher than usual in the future, simply because Trubey is replacing a good man in Ray Clymer, who resigned to go into industry.

Yes, Trubey has a good record at Fostoria where he has coached for the past seven years. His team was undefeated in 1936, and last fall captured the Buckeye league championship. In all, he has won 42 games, tied four, and lost 20.

But since it's a case of one good coach replacing another, you can expect Trubey to get everything possible out of the material available, even as Clymer did.

Trubey was a star on the last Wittenberg's really great football teams, the one that played Ohio State to a standstill in the first half, and lost only because the Lutherans, scenting victory, played unorthodox ball in the last half, and tossed intercepted passes into their own territory.

Big Bill Edwards, later coach at Western Reserve and for the Detroit Lions, was the star center on that Wittenberg team, you'll recall.

And at one end for the Lutherans was Mansfield's own All-Ohio Homer (Snooky) McFadden.

* * *

Cates Wreckers, of the Parks Association softball league, didn't say anything about this debacle, and I don't blame 'em:

Galion All-Stars 17. Cates 9.

They should have saved at least a score for the football season.

Second half of the All-American girls softball league finds Ouray (Bucky) Holda collecting centers on the bench of the South Bend Blue Sox.

In the first two weeks of play in the second half, Bucky hasn't been at bat once, and naturally his name doesn't appear in the league hitting averages.

Bucky is now listed as a utility infielder on the South Bend roster.

Pro Grid Outlook Bright

It Now Appears Game Was Never Even Sick.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

CHICAGO —(INS)— Just in case you had come to care in a noteworthy way, everything, as of now, is progressing satisfactorily for the National Football league with respect to what may be confidentally referred to as the forthcoming season.

* * *

This no doubt will be source of great comfort to those who must have sorely felt the need of same, for pro football once was known as the "sick man of sports" who had one foot in the dispensary and the other in a shroud. That was two months ago.

* * *

Today, an official survey of known and established assets shows 87 veteran players of the 1942 season available—and the player limit of each of the eight clubs to be 100 per cent subscribed.

Far from being a casualty of the war man-power situation, danged if pro football might not even prosper because of it. Anyway, this, briefly is the veteran-player situation when broken down to individual clubs.

The Philadelphia - Pittsburgh merger leads with 14, followed by Detroit wtih 12, the Chicago Cardinals, 11, New York 9, and Brooklyn 7 — these outfits being cited because they, in particular, were presumed to have very little left except the mortgage and a night watchman. Without going into that, we can only state that there are an astounding number of name guys still in circulation.

Chicago Bears: They have Luckman and Turner and the T-formation, it being possibly not always appreciated just how much the center means to that system. They also have Ray Nolting, Clark, McClean, Gary Famiglietti and a few more.

Green Bay: Isbell gone and Hudson showing every sign of wanting to take a seidlitz while he still has his health. They'll probably talk him back. Other good ones: Berezne, Ray, Lou Brock, Craig, Joe Laws, Andy Uram and Ted Fritsch.

There's a lot more, but that will serve as a jobber's sample.

How is this possible with a war on? You answer that question by asking another: Do you think they're using knee braces and ear phones at Guadalcanal? The face is the war has found pretty generally that it doesn't want football players.

* * *

By the very nature of their calling, a lot of them get eliminated because for from three to eight years they've been engaging in a very comical endeavor that's predicated on the block, shock and encounter method.

* * *

And so, in addition to the not inconsiderable number who are sedate family men, there are football players—bopped a few times too often on the skull—who are understood to be practically finding their way back from the war with ear trumpets. And others are tottering wistfully back on "football knees," barely able, in fact, to run 100 yards in 10 seconds flat.

Anyhow, the sick man isn't sick anymore. And the funny thing is that he never was.

All's Quiet---It Says Here

All's quiet in the Philadelphia Phils' camp now following a change in managers which brought about a mild insurrection by Phillie players against Owner William Cox, who surprised the sporting world by replacing Bucky Harris with Freddie Fitzsimmons of the Dodgers. Fitz and Cox are shown above.

* * * * *

Harris and Cox Hang Phils' Dirty Linen Out on Line

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The usually private maneuverings which precede dismissal of a big league manager were on display today in the case of Bucky Harris vs the Philadelphia Phillies, much like laundry on a line.

Baseball fans who had been wondering since Tuesday why the Phillies fired Harris — without telling him about it in advance—had the word of Phillies' President William D. Cox that he "was not going to sit around and watch the team under Harris' management slip into the cellar."

And, among other things, they were informed by Harris that Cox had assured him a week before the ouster that no managerial change would be made; that several weeks earlier Harris, as a member of the Phillies board of directors, had advocated a $20,000 a year salary increase for Cox.

It all came out yesterday when Harris, returning from St. Louis where he was replaced by Fred Fitzsimmons, told reporters in a lengthy interview that in his opinion Cox' statement of no managerial change "was a deliberate lie."

In Chicago, where he was reported negotiating for pitchers Paul Derringer and Bill Lee, Cox hotly retorted that Harris had promised not to issue an independent statement, and added: "Now you can see how Mr. Harris keeps his word."

Cox said he would issue a formal statement here Monday in reply to Harris, and that in the meantime he is "acting on the theory that if you give Harris enough rope he'll hang himself."

Recounting the events preceding his ouster, Harris said he had attended as a member every meeting of the board of directors prior to the July 18 session at which the change was planned. At one session six or eight weeks earlier, he said, it was proposed that the president's salary be boosted from $5,000 to $25,000 a year.

* * *

"Every body was silent and looked at me," Harris said, "and I got the idea they expected me to push the decision one way or the other. I said 'gentlemen I don't own any stock but I think he deserves the raise.' Somebody demurred a little, but the raise was okayed."

He recalled that prior to the July 21 game in Pittsburgh he had been "tipped" that he and Coach Earl Whitehill were to be fired. He said Cox telephoned him, asked about the rumor, which had reached the team, and "asked me to tell the players that no changes will be made. In my opinion this was a deliberate lie."

Has Volo Song In Top Form

Ben White Aims For Fourth Hambletonian.

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Silver-haired Ben White, the modern David Harum, had a hopeful gleam in his eye today as he worked over a sleek brown colt named Volo Song, a velvet beauty he hopes will carry him to his fourth driving triumph in the Hambletonian trotting classic.

* * *

Mild-mannered Ben, who has spent more than 50 of his 70 years riding sulkies on harness racing's Grand Circuit, is the only man ever to win trotting's Kentucky Derby three times.

* * *

Ben is cautious and makes no extravagant claims. You ask him what Volo Song's chances are and he smiles in that tight-lipped manner so familiar among harness men, and says: "Well, he's in top form."

Last year Ben was to pilot the Ambassador, an outside choice owned by William H. Strang of Brooklyn.

"We'll win easily," the plump driver confided to Strang.

Strang found this hard to believe and was among the most surprised when White brought the colt home in front for an upset triumph and his third Hambletonian victory. The reason is that in more than a half century on the Grant Circuit—harness racing's major league—Ben has developed an uncanny knack of knowing his horses are in top condition.

This year Strang's Volo Song —and Ben White—are ranked as the likely favorite. White has tutored the colt ever since he was a yearling, foaled in the blue grass of Kentucky, and is pointing for a win over two half brothers of the sleek son of Volomite.

The race will produce the classic's first father-son driving duel, with Ben facing his tall, rangy son on the seat in back of Barbara Babcock. This makes victory more important than ever to the elder White, because Ben is jealous of his reputation.

The veteran driver, a native of Canada, broke into the harness racing game as a groom at a Buffalo track. Soon he became a protege of Ed (Pop) Geers, the most famous reinsman in sulky history, and before long Ben became known as the "futurity magician" because of his skill and success in training and driving two and three-year-olds.

Old Ben has a habit of singing in the sulky, crooning his colts out in front. The odds are that he'll have a happy lilt in his voice at Empire City Aug. 11 when the band plays Ta Ra Ra Boom De-ay and the Hambletonian field comes sweeping down the stretch toward the wire. For Ben White wants this one and from that gleam in his eye Volo Song will be his four-time victory tune.

Madden Turns In Two-Hit Victory

Larry Madden allowed South Boulevard Midgets only two hits yesterday at Prospect park and turned in an 11-2 victory in the Junior Park softball league.

His battery mate, Rowe, clouted a home run, while Madden and Hillman collected triples.

Maple Lake won a forfeit from Brinkerhoff.

Boudreau Bobble Blamed

Lou Kicks One Away For Bagby to Yanks.

BOSTON — (AP) — Manager Lou Boudreau could take some of the blame today for greasing the Cleveland Indians' slide back into fifth place after their disastrous New York series which the Yankees took three to one.

* * *

With the count at two-all in the fifth inning of yesterday's series windup, Boudreau muffed Tuck Stainback's easy fly and the Yankee outfielder reached first, paving the way for two unearned runs that led to a 5 to 4 victory.

The champions collected seven hits off Jim Bagby while the Indians touched Ernie Bonham for six, half of them by Jeff Heath whose single and two homers with none aboard each time occasioned his return to regular duty after a two-week absence. It was Bagby's 10th loss against the same number of wins.

The New Yorkers opened the scoring with two runs in the third but the Indians evened things up in the fourth. Boudreau walked and went to third on Oris Hockett's double. Roy Cullenbine flied to score the Tribe's manager and Cullenbine raced to third, tallying later on Ken Keltner's fly ball.

Another error provided the Yankees' fifth run in the sixth when Hockett failed to snag Bill Dickey's drive. The Yankee catcher went to second and scored on Bill Johnson's one-bagger.

MEET GIANTS

CINCINNATI — (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds open a four game series against the New York Giants under the lights tonight at Crosley field.

Bucky Walters will be on the mound for the Reds. The Giants are sending Rube Fischer against him.

The Reds traded shutouts with the Boston Braves in yesterday's doubleheader. In the first Elmer Riddle hung up his fourteenth victory, 2 to 0, but the Braves retaliated in the nightcap, winning 3 to 0 behind a three-hit performance by Red Barrett.

Failure of his mates to support him in the first game cost portly Nate Andrews whatever chance he had of getting into the win column.

Two errors by Eddie Joost, another former Redleg farmhand, opened the way for the Reds to score their first run in the second inning. With one out Steve Mesner singled, Joost dropped a double play throw from Whitey Wietelmann to allow Bert Haas on first. Joost dropped another double play toss from Wietelmann and in the confusion, Mesner scored.

Singles by Dain Clay, Gee Walker and Mesner added another run in the sixth.

In the nightcap the Braves grabbed a two-run lead in the very first stanza on Chuck Workman's single and a home run by Butch Nieman. Nieman scored the other run of the game in the third on a walk, a stolen base and an easy jog across the plate when Phil Masi doubled.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK —(AP)— The Army-Navy game will open the football season at West Point in September — and probably close it, too . . . Army's Col. Biff Jones and Lieut. Commander Mal Stevens, who is organizing a team at the big Sampson, N. Y., naval training station, are bickering for a late September game . . . The hottest bidding at the coming Lexington, Ky., horse sales likely will be for a Blenheim colt from A. B. Hancock's lot. He's a half brother to Sky Larking.

Just before Luke Appling of the White Sox hit his first homer of the season against the Yanks the other day, he belted three of Jake Wade's batting practice tosses into the stands . . . In the clubhouse Luke was feeling so good about it that he offered to buy Wade a drink . . . "Sure," said Jake, "but I've made up my mind that if you can hit the ball out of the park when I'm throwing left handed, I'll just change over and throw right handed from now on."

* * *

Jerry Geisler, ex chairman of the California Boxing commission, is trying to get Promoter Joe Lynch to stage either a Hank Armstrong-Slugger White or Jackie Wilson-Jake Lamotta fight in Los Angeles for the benefit of "Service Sports, Inc." . . . Noodles Hahn, who pitched a no-hit game for the Reds in 1900, still works out with the team and pitches batting practice . . . What big eastern university (Army, of course) has given its grid coach his choice of a leave of absence, a salary cut or his outright release with an adjustment in his contract? . . . The official retirement of Whirlaway will be celebrated at Calumet Farm, Aug. 8, with speeches by Gov. Keen Johnson, the mayor of Lexington, newsreels, radio broadcasts—and practically everything but parimutuels.

Tim Cohane, New York World-Telegram: "Bill Cox's first instruction to Freddie Fitzsimmons, his new manager, probably dealt with the proper way to hold a knuckle ball."

The first no-hit ball game at Keesler Field, Miss., hardly had been reported when Pfc. Otto Riddle of Charlotte, N. C., who says he's a distant relative of the Reds' Elmer Riddle, came through with another. It was only a five-inning affair . . . Marine Lieut. James E. Johnson, who broke the Big Six high hurdles record when he ran for Missouri, recently had the motor of his fighter plane cut out when he was trying to pull out of a dive 700 feet above a Jap destroyer in Rekata Bay . . . When he got the motor going, Jim broke another record or two getting out of there.

Blues Defeat Indians Twice

Birds Drop Twin Bill But Keep Second Place.

(By Associated Press)

Kansas City allowed the Indianapolis Indians only five hits in beating them twice last night, typifying a program of doubleheaders in the American Association which saw lower-place clubs prove more than a match for the leaders.

The last place Blues took a 2-1 verdict over the third-place Tribe behind a 2-hitter by Johnny Johnson in the first game. Mel Queen came back in the nightcap to hurl a 3-hitter to win 1-0.

Columbus maintained the second rung although dropping 4-2 and 3-2 decisions to Minneapolis. Shut out until the fifth inning of the starter, the Millers punched home four runs to give Bill LeFebvre his 12th victory and a good sendoff to the Washington Senators. Otis Clark twirled two-hit ball to grab the afterpiece.

* * *

Toledo handed St. Paul its sixth straight defeat, 3-1, but Floyd Speer pitched his 11th victory as the Saints took the second game, 6-3.

The league-leading Milwaukee Brewers were upset 4-1 on a four-hitter by Louisville's Vic Johnson after they won the opener 12-4.

Appling Leads In American League

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Stan Musial, line drive hitting outfielder for the St. Louis Cardinals, added two points to his batting average this week to retain his major league leadership with .344

Veteran Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox shortstop, replaced his teammate Outfielder Guy Curtright as pace maker in the American league, adding 11 points to his average to post a .326.

The St. Louis Cardinals went to the top in the club hitting department, replacing the Brooklyn Dodgers, last week's leaders, with a mark of .273, the Cincinnati Reds maintained their top position in league fielding with a .979 percentage.

Philadelphia's last place Athletics stayed in first place in junior loop fielding with a mark of .977 and the Detroit Tigers maintained the pace in club hitting with an average of .259.

Haegg Tries Out New Pair of Shoes

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Gunder Haegg, Swedish track star, may toe the mark in a strange pair of shoes when he seeks a new mile record at Baldwin-Wallace tonight.

Haegg still was minus his $40 pair of hand-made white doeskin shoes early today. The blond flash left his choice footgear at Boston, his last stop, and expressed fears he would be forced to run in a strange pair.

Presented the city's last key of welcome, Haegg was greeted yesterday by Mayor Frank J. Lausche who said: "I hope you'll be the one to run that four-minute mile."

"I don't think I will," the Swede replied.

The track star will race against Gil Dodds, Boston divinity student; Bill Hulse, New York university freshman star, and Les Eisenhart, former Ohio State runner and Big Ten mile champion.

Haegg did his best American mile last Saturday in 4:05.3 which was slower than his best former mark of 4:04.6, and 4:02.6 set by Arne Anderson of Sweden.

Proceeds of the meet will go to the U. S. Army Air Force Aid society.

CLINT BROWN STUDIES JUMP INTO POLITICS

CLEVELAND — (AP) — "Fireman" Clint Brown, 40, former Cleveland Indians pitcher, is considering requests of friends that he run for mayor of nearby Westlake, his wife confirmed today.

James O. Nesbit, 60, present mayor of the village of 3,200, commented that "some of the old-time residents are anxious to defeat me and think they can do it by getting a big-name fellow like Brown."

Cubs Get Into Thick Of Fight

Have Good Chance at National Loop Flag.

By TED MEIER
(AP. Sports Writer)

VIRTUALLY unnoticed, the Chicago Cubs have moved into the thick of contention for first division honors in the National league and today have an excellent chance of beating out Pittsburgh, Brooklyn and Cincinnati for second place.

* * *

The Bruins have won 21 of their last 30 games and jumped from last to fifth place, only 2½ games out of the first division and 6½ behind the second place Pirates.

The Cubs have been getting good pitching and hitting at the same time. They beat Brooklyn for the third straight time yesterday, 12 to 3, as Hi Bithorn chalked up his 13th victory of the season.

The first place Cardinals, who open a three-game series with the slipping Dodgers today, dropped an 11-inning game to the Phillies, 3 to 2, when pinchhitter Jimmy Wasdell singled home Buster Adams.

In the American league, the New York Yankees made it three out of four and 21 victories in their last 31 games by again beating Cleveland, 5 to 4. Although belted for two homers, by Jeff Heath, Ernie Bonham yielded only six hits in winning his 10th of the campaign.

Early Wynn stopped a three-game Washington losing streak by hurling a five-hitter against the Chicago White Sox to win, 4 to 1, while Dick Siebert singled home Johnny Welaf in the 11th inning to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 3 to 2 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

Elmer Riddle hung up his 14th win in pitching Cincinnati to a three-hit 2 to 0 shutout over the Boston Braves in the first game of a twin bill, but Red Barrett duplicated his performance in the nightcap for a 3-0 Boston triumph and a split.

The New York Giants blasted over seven runs in the second inning against the Pirates and added five more in the third, but still had to call on relief Pitcher Ace Adams in beating Pittsburgh, 13 to 7. Adams came in in the sixth after Bill Maker hit a homer with the bases full of Pirates.

Detroit lost the first game of a doubleheader to the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 2, and was on the verge of losing the second when, with two out and none on in the ninth, Pitcher Hank Oana started a four-run uprising that led to a 5 to 2 Tiger victory.

COACH NAMED

TOLEDO —(AP)— The new physical education director at suburban Maumee high school is Robert Wren, 21, Toledo Mudhen utility infielder. Wren, a Cleveland resident and Ohio university graduate, will assume his new duties this fall.

"Woods and Waters"

By YUNCKER BROS.

Salmon and eel have exactly opposite spawning habits. Salmon migrate hundreds and even thousands of miles from the ocean into headwaters of fresh water streams to spawn. Eels migrate from fresh water streams far out into the ocean to spawn.

* * *

Don't be a flipper! Flipping away a cigarette is a careless habit, which, when carried into the woods, spreads devastation, through fires, to both trees and wildlife. Stamp out every butt, and do not toss lighted cigarettes out of a car window into grass or brush along the road. Forest fire prevention aids the war effort.

* * *

It is said by some authorities that the snapping turtle can go a long time without food, even months, they claim.

* * *

It's a good idea to break off a few feet from the end of your casting line, once or twice a season, and it may save you the best fish of the year. That part of the line always gets the most wear and consequently is the first to break under sudden strain.

* * *

Don't be a "one-lure" fisherman. Have an assortment of various types and colors of plugs and lures, and when one kind won't get action, quite often some other kind will. Yuncker's still carry an unusually complete selection of all the old reliable fish getters, as well as many new lures that have made a good record for themselves. Better check up on your needs, and make necessary replacements or additions, now!

* * *

To avoid hitting sunken ships in comparatively shallow waters, navigating officers of the British Merchant Navy are using an instrument so sensitive that it will record the passing of a shoal of fish under a ship.

* * *

Try this method of preparing and cooking bullheads next time you catch some. Make a strong salt brine, take a scrubbing brush and scrub thoroughly until you are satisfied they are clean, then cook it. The skin will peel off like a banana skin, and those who have tried this way say they're mighty good eating. This is said to be an old Indian way of preparing bullheads.

Wildcats Now, But Used to Be Gophers

Familiar names, but in a new setting. Herb Hein, left, Bud Garnaas, center, and Herman Frickey were well-known gridders at the University of Minnesota and here they are back for summer practice. Unusual thing, however, is that the boys are practicing with Northwestern U. where they are stationed in the Navy V-12 program. Frickey and Garnaas are backs, Hein is an end.

STOCK MARKET EARLY TRADES SHOW DECLINE

Report Indicates Nation's Liquor Supply Should Last Three Years.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks were lower in today's early market dealings, continuing the decline of the previous session.

Down fractions to around a point at a comparatively quiet opening were Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union, Sears Roebuck, Southern Railway, and General Electric.

Followers of the distilling shares found interest in estimates that the 439,519,392 gallons of distilled spirits on hand June 30 would last a little more than three years at the rate of consumption for the fiscal year just ended.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Grains slumped in nervous trading at the start today, influenced by the initial weakness in securities and news from Europe indicating the Italian situation appeared to be heading for a climax.

Wheat started unchanged to ¼ lower, September $1.44⅛-$1.44. December $1.45¾, and rye was ⅛-½ lower, September $1.00¾-½.

THEATERS

Gambling Picture.

Cary Grant is in the starring role in RKO Radio's "Mr. Lucky," story of a gambling ship owner and his desire for a bankroll, now at the Ohio. Grant operates a gambling ship, but fortunes turn against him and he needs cash to continue. He meets Loraine Day, a New York socialite who is active in war charities. Grant makes a play for her with the intention of grabbing off a sizeable amount of cash. Charles Bickford, Gladys Cooper, Henry Stephenson and Alan Carney top the supporting role.

White Savage.

"White Savage," Universal picture, opens today at the Madison. A South Sea island paradise is the locale of the story, a romantic action tale dealing with the plight of a shark hunter who loves the native princess. Maria Montez plays the princess and Jon Hall the shark hunter. Sabu appears in the picture reuniting the three stars of "Arabian Nights." Bobby Readick, Frank Craven and William Gargan play the top roles in the co-attraction, "Harrigan's Kid."

The Desperadoes.

Randolph Scott is featured in the technicolor drama, "The Desperadoes," now as the hard-bitten, trigger-fast ex-bandit turned sheriff. Also featured are Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes and Edgar Buchanan. Locale of the film is a sun-drenched frontier town, Red Valley. Into Red Valley rides a man-hunted killer. This starts the action. "The Mad Russian," or Bert Gordon is starred with Margaret Lindsay and John Beal in "Let's Have Fnn," co-attraction at the Park.

Yankee Doodle Dandy.

To the screen of the Ritz today comes the story of the late George M. Cohan, America's master entertainer. James Cagney plays the part of Cohan while Joan Leslie is seen as Mrs. Cohan. The film presents the life story of Cohan from the time he makes his first appearance until he is presented the congressional medal of honor by President Roosevelt.

Allied Food for Sicilians

Food is a problem in Sicily as it is in all other war-torn areas. The Allies face the problem of feeding not only its Army of Occupation but the civilian population as well. Here civilians of Vizzini, Sicily, receive bread rations under military supervision.

Turns Down $1,000 for His Chance to Raid Wake Island

U. S. 7TH AIRFORCE HEADQUARTERS, Hawaii — Marine Sgt. William C. Campbell of Denver, Colo., turned down $1,000 offered for his chance to raid Wake Island this week and proved he was the right fellow by shooting down a Japanese Zero in air combat.

The story was told today by Col. William J. Holzapfel, 34, of Racine, Wis., commander of the Liberator force which attacked Japanese-held Wake twice during the week.

Sgt. Earl D. Nielson, 22, of Cleveland, O., suffered an attack of appendicitis necessitating an emergency operation and was deprived of his chance to go as gunner on one plane. Army fliers asked for volunteers for the job from marine ranks. Every gunner wanted to go. They drew names from a hat and Campbell won.

The losers yelled and started making cash offers. Finally a marine captain offered $1,000 cash. Campbell served aboard a Liberator Piloted by Lieut. Richard S. Thompson, 24, of Philadelphia, Pa., who was wounded in the leg by flak that damaged the wires controlling the propellers. The wiring was fixed in flight by Tech. Sgt. Clarence T. Lopka, 23, of Cleveland.

Holzapfel said only one Liberator was lost and the crews lost 13 killed and three wounded on the two raids. The opposition, he said, was the worst since raids started on Wake after it was captured by the Japanese in December, 1941. Sixteen enemy planes were destroyed.

NAZIS TRYING TO GRAB ITALY, RUMORS ASSERT

will be lost and a decision may be forthcoming immediately.

The Germans were reported to have seized all telephonic and telegraphic offices in northern Italy and began to censor messages heavily in a determined effort to prevent leakages of movements by their troops through the Brenner Pass.

From Madrid came word that German reinforcements were streaming into northern Italy and the Istrian peninsula where the Nazis are swiftly extending their grip on strategic points. Hitler's armed forces were said to have taken up positions at strategic bridges, passes and road junctions in an apparent effort to gain complete control.

At numerous positions taken over, it was said, the Nazis immediately set up machine-gun nests and mortar batteries.

The Germans were said to have entered certain northern ports to guard Italian submarines and their crews who have been confined to their vessels until German crews reportedly en route can take charge.

The Algiers radio said it received an unconfirmed rumor that Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio was insisting on the withdrawal of troops from northern Italy. This followed earlier reports that Badoglio had asked Hans Georg von Mackensen, the Nazi ambassador to Rome, to send 40 German divisions to defend all Italy. The Nazis apparently were willing to send troops to defend a northern line along the Po river but dared not risk sending forces into threatened southern Italy.

Broadcasting in Italian, the Algiers radio warned the Italian people that Badoglio must make peace quickly under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's terms if he wants Italy to survive.

"The sands are running out," said radio Algiers.

"If Badoglio forgets his duty the time has come for the Italian people to show they have really regained their freedom."

Officials of Allied governments meanwhile stood by in London in expectation that some break would come over the week-end in the form of an answer to Gen. Eisenhower's appeal to the Italians to lay down their arms and cease assistance to the Germans.

Although there as yet has been no official move toward an armistice, rumors were widespread that the Italians had begun preliminary negotiations.

Three Italian Islands Surrender

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(INS)—An Italy on the verge of capitulation or civil war lost three more of its island possessions in the Mediterranean today and key-points on the mainland shuddered under the heavy impact of Flying Fortress bombs.

As a communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower announced steady advances by American, Canadian and British troops wiping up the remnants of Axis opposition on Sicily, the little islands of Favignana, Levanzo and Marettimo in the Tyrrhenian Sea off the Sicilian port of Trapani surrendered unconditionally.

Troops of the United States Seventh army took over the three small islands three weeks to the day after the Allied invasion of Sicily began.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth army meanwhile continued slow but steady advances on the Catania front, inflicting heavy casualties upon the entrenched Germans.

At the same time, American detachments of the Seventh army under command of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., cracked harder into advance German positions after sweeping eastward into the teeth of a formidable Nazi line thrown up across the island to shield the Axis bridgehead in the Messina triangle.

Ciano Deposed as Vatican Ambassador

LONDON—(U.P.)—Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian ambassador to the Vatican, followed his father-in-law, Benito Mussolini, into retirement today amid growing indications that the Italian peace offensive was approaching the showdown stage.

Ciano's deposal was disclosed in a Rome broadcast announcing that King Victor Emmanuel III had accepted his "resignation" as ambassador to the Vatican. He had been named to the post by Mussolini last Feb. 8 only a week after his removal as Italian foreign minister, a portfolio he held for six years.

European reports said Ciano and his wife Edda, Mussolini's daughter, had taken refuge in Vatican City following Mussolini's ouster last Sunday.

Nazis Disarming Italians In Greece

LONDON — (INS) — The Cairo radio said today that "it has just been learned that German troops have begun to disarm Italian troops in the neighborhood of Maritza, Greece."

The broadcast was recorded by Reuter.

Both Reuter and Exchange Telegraph said it was reliably reported that the Germans also had begun to disarm the Italian troops at Larisa.

Report Big Convoy Passes Gibraltar

LONDON—(INS)—A new fleet of 147 Allied merchant ships passed through the Straits of Gibraltar yesterday, the Spanish radio said today in an unconfirmed report recorded by Reuter.

The convoyed vessels were strongly escorted by warships, it was said.

The ship movements reportedly were effected in two groups. The initial fleet consisted of 107 merchantmen. Later, an additional 40 entered the Mediterranean without calling at Gibraltar, it was said.

Bombard Italian Coastal Targets

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA — (INS) — Allied cruisers in a bombardment of the eastern shore of the Italian mainland destroyed or damaged several bridges near Locri, an official communique said today.

Locri is situated on the eastern side of the toe of the Italian boot.

700 Fascists Killed In Milan

BERN, Switzerland —(INS)—The death toll of Fascists killed by peace rioters in Milan in demonstrations against Marshal Pietro Badoglio's failure to sign an immediate peace with the Allies rose to 700 today.

Seemingly reliable reports from across the Italian border said that Badoglio's troops had met only with moderate success in their efforts to wipe out disorders and put an end to a virtual general strike which tied up Milan's great war industries.

Slovenes Crack Italian Lines

LONDON —(INS)— Slovene partisans have battled their way through sagging Italian lines and reached the Udine region of northern Italy, Yugoslavian circles in London reported today, quoting last-minute information from that region.

The partisan troops were identified as the Fifth and Sixth brigades which, upon crashing through the Italian lines, immediately began to stir up the Slovene inhabitants of the region, calling upon them to engage in active resistance.

Many already have joined the guerrillia forces, the Yugoslav sources declared.

CHICKEN GARAGE

SIOUX CITY, Ia. — (INS) — A successful "farm" is being operated almost in the heart of Sioux City's business district. The war pinched the garage business and at the same time created a demand for more food. So E. C. Gaynor, operator of a six-story garage, went into the chicken business.

He has approximately 6,000 White Leghorns ranging in age from a few days to two months on two floors of the garage. The chickens seem to thrive in their indoor quarters Gaynor said, and put on weight as rapidly as those reared in farmyards.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — (INS) — County offices of the farm security administration are to start taking flood restoration loan applications Monday, Aug. 2, from farmers in nine Ohio counties, P. O. Beck, regional FSA director announced today.

Farmers in Defiance, Fulton, Henry, Lucas, Mercer, Paulding, Van Wert, Williams and Wood counties in Ohio are eligible for the flood restoration loans, Beck said.

IT'S YOUR MOVE

CAMP POLK, La.—(INS)—Camp Polk boasts a private, Harold N. Fischer, of New York City, who can beat 22 checker players and five chess players at one time. "It really isn't hard unless I meet someone with professional ability," the 42-year-old three-time champion explained.

"The untrained checker or chess player plans only a move at a time. By thinking only two or three ahead, the professional, who regularly plans 10 or 15 moves in advance, can take on as many as 50 amateurs."

SECRET AGENT X-9

BACK HOME IN THE U.S., I'D JAIL YOU BOTH AS SPIES! WE'RE IN A NEUTRAL COUNTRY NOW! BEAT IT, IF YOU KNOW WHAT'S GOOD FOR YOU!

BUT WE DON'T WANT TO LEAVE. DO WE, BARON?

NO, SEÑORA DOÑA PAO!

SOMETHING TELLS ME YOU'RE A G-MAN. ARE YOU?

YES!

SHAKE, G-MAN!

WE'RE NOT SPIES!

WE'RE WORKING IN THIS NEUTRAL COUNTRY FOR SCOTLAND YARD!

WHAT ARE YOUR REAL NAMES?

DAISY ROSE!

JACK KENNETH!

IN THAT CASE YOU WON'T MIND TAKING A TRIP TO LONDON?

LATER, ON THE PLANE TO LONDON....

YOU AMERICAN G-MEN ARE CERTAINLY SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS!

SO WAS SHERLOCK HOLMES!

SCOTLAND YARD— HEADQUARTERS OF BRITAIN'S FAMED DETECTIVE BUREAU—

INSPECTOR— THERE'S AN AMERICAN G-MAN OUTSIDE WITH DAISY ROSE AND JACK KENNETH. HE CALLS HIMSELF X-9.

X-9! I KNOW HIM! SEND THEM IN!

HELLO, INSPECTOR— DO YOU KNOW THESE PEOPLE?

CERTAINLY— THEY ARE OUR TWO BEST FOREIGN OPERATIVES! THEN YOU'RE ALL WORKING ON THE SAME CASE TOGETHER!

WE ALL THREE GOT POSSESSION OF THAT LIST OF THE UNDERGROUND MOVEMENT IN THE PHILIPPINES.

WAIT! I HAVE JUST LEARNED THAT THERE'S MUCH MORE TO THE CASE THAN THAT. LET ME TELL YOU!

X-9 IS IN CONFERENCE WITH A SCOTLAND YARD INSPECTOR IN LONDON.

X-9, I'VE JUST BEEN IN TOUCH WITH YOUR CHIEF IN WASHINGTON. THIS CASE YOU'RE ON LOOKS LIKE ESPIONAGE. ACTUALLY IT'S INTERNATIONAL ROBBERY!

WHAT DO YOU MEAN, INSPECTOR?

FOREIGN AGENTS HAVE BEEN SHIPPING UNCUT DIAMONDS INTO THE U.S. INNOCENT DIPLOMATS ARE INVOLVED, BUT WE DON'T KNOW JUST HOW.

WE UNDERSTAND A CACHE OF DIAMONDS, WORTH MORE THAN A MILLION DOLLARS, IS ON ITS WAY TO AMERICA RIGHT NOW!

MEANWHILE, BACKSTAGE IN A WASHINGTON THEATRE.

MISS GILDA, THAT WAS A WONDERFUL PERFORMANCE!..... LITTLE CORPORAL WANTS TO SEE YOU!

DID YOU SAY LITTLE CORPORAL WANTED TO SEE ME?

YES, MISS GILDA. HE'S WAITING FOR YOU IN THE OFFICE.

COME IN, GILDA!

MR. CORPORAL

THEATRICAL PRODUCTIONS

WHAT DO YOU WANT, LITTLE CORPORAL?

SIT DOWN, GILDA! STOP LOOKING SO IMPATIENT! IT'S NOT BECOMING!

I'VE GOT ANOTHER JOB FOR YOU!

IF IT'S A JOB LIKE THE LAST ONE, I DON'T WANT IT!

LISTEN, LITTLE CORPORAL— I ALMOST GOT INTO TROUBLE WITH THE POLICE ON ACCOUNT OF THE LAST JOB I DID FOR YOU! I'M THROUGH!

THROUGH, EH?

COME HERE, GILDA! LOOK AT THIS!

THIS IS HOW YOU LOOKED WHEN YOU FIRST CAME TO ME FOR A JOB IN THE THEATRE. I MADE A FOUR-STAR ACTRESS OUT OF YOU! YOU'D STILL BE A JUKE-BOX GIRL, IF NOT FOR ME!

DON'T KEEP THROWING THIS UP TO ME! I'M AN ACTRESS! I WON'T HELP YOU IN YOUR RACKETS!

SUPPOSE I CALL THE POLICE AND TELL THEM WHAT I KNOW ABOUT THE MURDER OF THAT DIPLOMAT?

WORRIED AS ARMS OUTPUT LAGS AGAIN

Nelson Reveals Production of Airplanes, Other Items Behind Schedule.

BLAMES MANPOWER

WPB Chairman Calls For a 30 Per Cent Boost In Last Half of Year.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Preliminary statistics showed today that war production in July made no substantial improvement over June and highly-placed government officials no longer concealed their concern over the three months lag.

Arms output began falling behind schedule in May and War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson reported yesterday that while June production was up two per cent over May, it was behind schedule in most categories including the one regarded most vital—airplanes.

Nelson said that if 1943 goals are to be achieved, the average monthly output thereafter must be 30 per cent higher than the average output during the previous six months.

He said this presents a "tremendous challenge" to industry and called for vigorous attacks on absenteeism, strikes, management delays and over-optimism stemming from Allied triumphs.

Officials frankly said that unless there was a tremendous spurt in production in the last week of July, the 30 per cent increase called for by Nelson would not be achieved this month. They stated that while statistics yet are too incomplete to get an accurate picture, the reports nevertheless forecast slight improvement over June.

Officials disagree over the chief causes of the slump. Ranking officers in the armed services tend to lay much of the blame on national complacency since Allied successes in Africa and Sicily.

WPB experts believe the causes go deeper. Nelson is understood to feel that manpower problems are playing an important role. Some reports indicate that this problem has become a real one in the airplane plants on the Pacific coast.

Nelson reported the following

SOUNDS GOOD

Bureau Sees Speedy End to Current Meat Shortage.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Record livestock production indicates a speedy end to the current meat shortage, the bureau of agricultural economics says.

The bureau reported that unusually large supplies of livestock will be available for slaughter during the remainder of this year and in 1944.

"The extent to which these marketings will show up in regular commercial channels is still uncertain," the bureau said, "but with livestock numbers and production at their present record level and beginning to outrun total feed resources, expanded marketings in the near future appear fairly certain."

WELL, FRANK?

Walker Expected to Make Up Mind On Visit.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— National Democratic Chairman Frank Walker is expected to make up his mind early in August whether to attend a meeting on federal patronage in Ohio.

Walker, who also is postmaster general, is out west and will return to his office a couple of weeks in advance of the meeting planned by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

Following the recent death of Mrs. Foss, the son had his father come to his home and planned on catering to the aged man. But instead, he finds his father roofing a farm home and assisting in painting his son's house.

Two Dead, Three Hurt as Cars Collide Head-On West of City

Girl, 18, and Man Are Crash Victims

Collision Killing Ontario Residents Occurs Before Officer Catches Up With Fast-Moving Car.

Before a state highway patrolman could catch up with the driver of one of the cars to arrest him on a speeding charge, two automobiles met in a head-on collision on U. S. Route 30-S last night, killing two persons and injuring three others, one of them critically.

THE DEAD

Miss Elsie May Milliron, 18, of Ontario.
Orlo J. Rush, 64, of near Ontario.

THE INJURED

Mrs. Lottie Rush, 61, wife of one of the dead. Condition critical.
Arthur Milliron, 61, father of the other victim. Condition good.
Richard Logan, 13, 340 Cedar street, Mansfield. Condition good.

Young Logan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Logan, 340 Cedar street, Mansfield, and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Rush.

State highway patrolmen said Mr. and Mrs. Rush and their grandson were in one car and Milliron and his daughter in the other when the two vehicles collided three miles west of Mansfield in front of the Roxy Inn at about 11:15 p. m.

Richland County's 1943 Traffic Toll

11

This date last Year—7.

The two deaths brought Richland county's traffic toll to 11 for the year. Last year on this date seven had been killed in traffic crashes.

Just a few minutes before the crash, Highway Patrolman Harry Hurst of the Mansfield sub-station started in pursuit of Milliron's auto to arrest the driver. Hurst said he noticed the car being driven at excessive speed as it passed the Erie railroad underpass, a short distance west of the crash scene.

Hurst estimated he was driving about two blocks behind the Milliron car when it disappeared from view for a few seconds beyond a rise in the pavement.

The officer said before he sighted the car again it had already become involved in the crash. "I saw both of them smashed up on down the road a short distance ahead of me, as I came up over the hill," Hurst said.

He expressed the opinion that

FERGUSON IN 2-WAY BATTLE

Refuses to Pay For Probe at Youngstown, Threatens Old Age Pension Check-up.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Democratic State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, battled on two fronts today against the Republican state administration as Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert contemplated legal action to force payment of his Mahoning county vice investigators and Ferguson threatened investigation of old age pension administration.

Herbert, according to his chief assistant, E. G. Schuessler, was considering a mandamus suit to force payment of special investigator Simon Leis and the entire staff of Youngstown vice investigators whose check have been held up by the auditor's office.

Charging that "money has been extravagantly thrown away during 15 months of this Youngstown investigation, with little accomplished," Ferguson challenged a $35,000 grant to Herbert by the state emergency board to pay for the investigation during the balance of 1943.

He held up vouchers for more than $4,000, asserting that a "substantial portion" of the expenses to be paid from the emergency grant were incurred while the legislature still was in session and before the request to the emergency board.

"Under these circumstances I do not see how it is possible to legally pay these bills as an emergency," Ferguson said.

Schuessler replied that Ferguson "has no legal ground to stand

Mansfield Mother Dies In Florida Of Tropical Fever

Victim of tropical fever which she contracted several weeks ago, Mrs. Blanche Stanley Beck, 23, wife of Capt. Charles A. Beck, of the army air force, died yesterday in a hospital in Florida.

The body is expected to arrive in Mansfield this evening by plane from Coral Gables, Fla., where Capt. Beck is stationed.

Mrs. Beck was born in Mansfield June 25, 1920, and graduated from Mansfield senior high school.

Surviving besides her husband are her baby daughter, Charlene Ann; her father, O. C. FREED ON BOND

DETROIT —(INS)— Convicted of filing false information with his draft board, Jimmy Orlando, 28-year-old Red Wing hockey star, was free today on $2,000 bond, as his attorneys planned an appeal of his sentence of four years and fine of $2,000.

Scene of Fatal Traffic Crash, Two Victims

Taxi Operators Protest Plan To Merge Into Central Office

The question of a taxi merger in Mansfield to meet an anticipated cut in gasoline allocations for taxi firms was still undecided today after the five company managers in the city failed to agree on the proposed merger at a meeting yesterday with an Office of Defense Transportation representative.

One of the taxi operators at the session, who asked that his name be withheld, said the plans as offered by the ODT "has possibilities, but there's a lot of things to be worked out yet."

It was learned that the taxi operators were more agreeable toward formation of a corporation in which all of them would own stock rather than the proposed partnership plan under which each would operate his own cabs from a central office.

"It's going to be pretty hard to get five company owners to agree to a partnership and try to operate satisfactorily under such an arrangement," one of the firm owners said.

The ODT yesterday repeated its warning to taxi firms that further gasoline rationing is headed for the middle west and they will have to agree on an arrangement whereby they can haul more passengers with fewer trips or take some of their cabs out of operation.

The merger idea was offered in Mansfield by the ODT which said its investigation here showed that too many cabs are making trips for one passenger, while a centralized control plan would make it possible to pick up several fares in one cab in the same part of the city.

M'GREGOR RAPS OPA THEORISTS

By VIRGIL A. STANFIELD

The OPA system will break down completely unless practical men replace the theorists who are in charge of it, Congressman J. Harry McGregor predicted last night at an open forum session at the Richland county courthouse.

Nearly 150 persons, representing labor, farmers, white-collar workers, and professional men and a number of housewives filled the common pleas courtroom to ask the congressman questions about things that have been puzzling them. The "town hall" meeting was sponsored by the Mansfield League of Women Voters, and Mrs. D. O. Meese, head of the league, presided.

Because a number of the questions dealt with rationing, food production, and inflation, the congressman spent considerable time discussing the difficulties of

Giraud Named New Commander of All French Fighters

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA —(INS)— In a step designed to knit the Fighting French and other anti-Axis armed forces of France into a single combat machine, Gen. Henri Giraud today was named commander-in-chief of all French forces in the Mediterranean.

Simultaneously, Gen. Charles De Gaulle, Fighting French leader, was appointed president of the council of national defense.

The move eliminated the dual chairmanship of the National Liberation committee, streamlining the conduct of that organization. It is expected to boost its efficiency.

Observers predicted the move will encourage Frenchmen everywhere while installing new confidence in their leaders and giving a new burst of strength to the battle against Hitler.

Big Break In Mediterranean Awaited Hourly

Germans Reported to Have Seized All Telephone, Telegraphic Lines, Key Bridges and Ports In North; Badoglio Seen Stalling.

BULLETIN

MADRID—(UP)—Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio of Italy has established direct contact with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower through representatives sent by airplane to North Africa, reports from France said today.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Possibility Nazi Germany may utilize alleged "Communist uprisings" in Italy as an excuse for full-scale military occupation before Marshal Pietro Badoglio signs peace with the Allies was seen today in a flood of ominous dispatches reaching London.

As all signs pointed to a momentous break within the next few hours that they may take Italy out of the war or else turn the peninsula into a bloody battlefield, there were numerous signs that Adolf Hitler may have decided to seize the country and transform it into the arena of a showdown fight to save Germany itself from early invasion.

Radio broadcasts from Berlin and dispatches circulated by the official Nazi DNB news agency emphasized the spread of Communist demonstrations reported spreading throughout Italy.

Developments came fast as a decision by the Italian government on the honorable peace offered by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower appeared near.

The latest flood of rumors and reports included:

1. A report that the Nazis were seizing control of all northern Italy.

2. Reports that German troops were disarming Italian soldiers in Greece.

3. German consuls were said to have advised German residents in Italy to leave for their homes immediately.

4. Unconfirmed rumors spread through London that an armistice with Italy will be signed tomorrow.

5. A political commentator of the Berlin radio said that "the coming week may bring about extremely important developments for us and the European continent."

From the flood of reports pouring into London from the continent it appeared Italian Marshal Badoglio was striving to achieve peace with the Allies while the Nazis threatened to turn Italy into a battleground to counter the approach of Allied armies close to the borders of the reich.

The reports from the Middle East concerning disarming of Italian troops indicated a German determination to prevent Badoglio from reclaiming Italian soldiers in occupied territories prior to signing of armistice.

Official London said that no overture has been received as yet from Badoglio and it appears that he is stalling despite the popular clamor for peace in an attempt to prevent Italy from becoming a battleground and secure the return of some 30 Italian divisions in the Balkans and 270,000 Italian workers from Germany.

If Germany has begun to seize Italian forces Badoglio's efforts

SWITCH: Air Fleets Turn to Battering Remscheid Factories

(By United Press)

LONDON—British air fleets, apparently crossing Hamburg off their target list as virtually destroyed after seven raids in 120 hours, switched the greatest air offensive of all time back to the bomb-pocked Ruhr valley last night and heavily attacked the production center of Remscheid.

Rounding out a week in which British and American bombers dropped more than 15,000 tons of bombs on western Europe, four-engined Stirlings, Lancasters and Halifaxes concentrated their assault on the great machine tool factories clustered in and around Remscheid.

Fifteen bombers were lost, the air ministry announced.

Hardly had the night raiders returned to their bases than daylight bombers and fighters roared out across the English southeast coast to carry the almost non-stop offensive into its second week. One particularly large formation of bombers raced over the English channel in the direction of Boulogne.

With a night and a day still to go, the Allies already have dropped perhaps 23,500 tons of bombs on war factories, shipyards, airfields and railway targets in Germany and occupied western Europe this month, some 4,500 tons more than during June, the previous record month.

Last night's raid on Remscheid, carried out in clear weather that enabled the bombers to pin-point their targets, was the first announced on that southern Ruhr city, though it may have been hit

HOT: Yanks Attacking Munda Use Flame-Throwers on Japs

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The ninth naval bombardment this month against Japanese positions on Kiska in the Aleutians and another aerial attack by a lone Flying Fortress were announced today by the navy.

(By International News Service)

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA —American troops, employing tanks and flame throwers, moved forward in a general advance today on the Jap-held Munda air base on New Georgia island in the Solomons.

The flame-throwers and tanks were thrown into action on the southern flank as the Allies increased their pressure in that sector. On the northern flank, the Allies repulsed a counter-attack.

Meanwhile, light Allied naval forces struck at Japanese shipping in the Vitiaz straits off New Guinea and destroyed seven supply-laden barges.

Despite the worst weather that has prevailed in New Guinea in many weeks, four-motored American Liberator bombers again blasted the important Japanese base at Salamaua, while ground fighting continued in the Komiatumi-Mount Tambu area and northwest of Tambu bay. Twenty-five tons of bombs were dropped in the Salamaua area, but results could not be observed because of the poor visibility.

Japanese dive-bombers made light, ineffective raids on Allied positions in the Bobubi area and at Tambu bay. Half a dozen enemy bombers, covered by an unusually large force of 19 fighters, also bombed and strafed the Garoka area, but failed to achieve any substantial results.

The use of flame-throwers in the bitter fighting taking place in
